"LET'S BEAT IT" PROMISING

Musical Play That Is Expected to Make New York Laugh Produced Under Difficulties.

(Epecial to New York World, Published by Arrangement.) HEADQUARTERS 27TH DIVISION, A. E. F., Jan. 7.- (Mail)-When the 27th Division marched through Pleardy, 27th Division marched through Picardy, through territory hideously scarred by the German advance and up to the jumping-off place from which New York's boys were to begin their chass into the concrete defenses which com-prised the Hindenburg line, few men were left behind. Private Arnold Jarref will play a part as the first street cleaner for a time and second street cleaner for a were left behind.

were left behind. There was need for every available man in the push. Every fellow who could carry a rifle was sent into the fray. Anticipating resistance far more stiff than was actually put up, Major-General O'Ryan, commanding the divi-sion, called for the services of every man who was not sorely needed. Among the few who were compelled man who was not sorely needed. Among the few who were compelled to remain behind to care for the wounded were Lieutenant William A. Halloran, Jr., director of the divisional theatrical troupe, in charge of stretcher bearers and first ald men working out of casualty clearing stations, and Pri-vate Harry Gribble, also of the theat-rical troupe. The other members of the troupe were put on stretchers and sent forward to bring in the wounded. sent forward to bring in the wounded.

Two Men Disappointed.

The Lieutenant and Gribble were somewhat discruntled and unhappy be-cause they were unable to get into the fighting. They wanted an opportunity to give the foe an idea of their con-tempt for him. The Lieutenant is a machine-gun officer and Gribble is a to date: doughboy-a scrapper. So to be left behind during the big stunt-the big-gest in which the division participated was a bitter blow. There were hours between battles when these men had little in the line of military duty to do. There were times when they could rest, and, if they so desired, listen to the parking guns and imarine what was rolns on three and imagine what was going on three and imagine what was going on three or four miles in advance of where they were. But Lieutenant Halloran and Gribble had other things to think about. They had other uses for their imaginations. They were writing a big musical production to give to New York upon the return of the division to America. If dign't take long for the 27th and

It didn't take long for the 27th and 30th divisions to push the Boche far beyond the St. Quentin Canal.

Play Factory Portable.

At Bellicourt, where some of the heaviest fighting took place, and where the canal enters the diamal tunand al which curves through the hill over where the canal enters the dismal tun-nel which curves through the hill over which the Yanks fought so gallantly, were numerous small pockets in which first the Germans and later the 27th boys lived between battles. As the doughboys and artillery advanced, the Licutenant and his first aid men moved forward. Into one of those dank, dark pockets moved the Licutenant and Gribble with their pocket typewriter and their shell bandages, copy paper and imaginations. The foe, of course, had the exact range on the canal, and frequently some of his high explosives would tear down into the water. And not infrequently a shell would drop uncomfortably near the crude play factory. And at night German airmen would come over to pay their respects to the men who hap-pened to be behind the push. So there were sufficient excitement and noise for all concerned. Bit by bit the first act had been pieced together. The writers had con-ceived and written the first part of the book when the division was yet in pieced together. The writers had con-ceived and written the first part of the book when the division was yet in Newport News, awaiting orders to em-bark for France. And between stunts in the lines in France they had woven the remainder of the act. They were natisfied, then, that they could leave the first act and build a second half to the production.

Comedy Under Difficulties.

They turned to that task in the cramped underground quarters in the canal when their military work slack-ened. By candlelight they pounded their machine, grinding out the laughs and complications which made the work good enough to present to the work good enough to present to the musical comedy lovers of their home land. It was a struggle to com-pose a show devoid of war under such conditions.

DOCTORS ARE REGISTERED

Army Officers Among Those Enrolled for Factories.

WASHINGTON .- Since the working conditions service, Department of La-bor, started its registry for industrial physicians, there has been a large encoliment. Among the men whose experience and special knowledge fit them for duty in plants are many army offi-cers, just relieved from service in the Medical Corps, and a substantial per-centage of the registration includes these men.

The Department of Labor not only The Department of Labor not only supplies industrial physicians, but pro-vides for the intensive training neces-sary for what may be called a new branch of the profession of medicine. It has een demonstrated that not every physician or surgeon is fitted for the task of safaguarding the health for the task of safeguarding the health of workers. These health engineers must watch the human machinery and make sure that it is fitted to the work required of it. They must understand the industry to which they are at-tached and must have a profound knowledge of human nature as well as medicine. As industrial physicians are everywhere superseding contract physicians the demand for them is constantly increasing,
