Two new branches of the United States Employment Service have been installed in the main Portland office at Third and Oak streets.

The keynote of the work of the junior guidance and placement division, which might properly be called philanthropic, is the sympathetic desire to help young persons and to arouse in them enthusiasm to help themselves.

The first step in the youth's education preliminary to his entrance into industry. Poverty sometimes necessitates immediate work, which still will be provided at the public schools.

The function of the Portland branch of the handicap bureau will be to help the hundreds who were the builders of yesterday, but jobless today and the hopeless of tomorrow.

Director Smith, who still has his headquarters in Chicago. The head office of this bureau likely will be moved to Washington soon.

Speaking of the new handicap bureau, Mr. Smith said: "More men who have been put aside for being too old are being brought back than ever before in history."

Another three-star show will prevail under the Orpheum management at the Helig next week beginning with the matinee tomorrow.
