OLD RULINGS ARE REVIVED

Permission of Federal Government Required to Drill Wells or Do Development Work.

WASHINGTON, March 25 .- Officials of the state department have begun a study of the order of the department of industry at Mexico City threatening to punish foreign companies and individuals for drilling wells or doing petroleum development work without permission of the federal government, it was learned authoritatively today. The order, which was made public by the state department yesterday, reopens the Mexican oil situation, which was believed to have been left to the Mexican courts and the extra session of the Mexican congress to decide without further action either by the oil men or the Mexican government. British and French oil companies, as well as American, are interested in the recent developments. industry at Mexico City threatening to Ambassador Fletcher, who has been in Washington for some months aiding acting Secretary of State Polk during the absence of Secretary Lansing in Paris, conferred today with representatives of the American oil companies, and a statement of the oil companies, position was laid before him.

Trouble Dates Back to 1915.

The feature of the dil trouble in-volved in the circular order issued in Mexico City last Saturday is said to date back to January, 1915, when Car-ranza was first chief and was beset ranga was lifst chief and was beet with enemies on every side. At that time he decreed that all development work should stop immediately and that no new work should be undertaken without permission. Representatives of the British, French and American oil companies protested against this order, but were assured by Carranza government officials and the diplomatic representative of the United States in Vera Cruz that the sole purpose of this decree was to exercise the proper police power of the state and to prevent unsafe drilling and building operations. In 1917, when the new donstitution was put into effect, the Mexican government began to refuse permits for such work, according to authoritative information. An American company was refused a permit for such work in December, 1917, alleging it was a foreign corporation and as such had no right to receive a concession to develop oil. This was the first open attempt by the Mexican government to establish the government ownership of all mineral deposits as defined in the new constitution. On the power of the state and to prevent fined in the new constitution. On the company's protest that this ruling abridged its legal rights, the Mexican government granted a provisional perif to complete the operations in ques

Decrees Declared Confiscatory. Subsequent decrees were announced, each intending to put this effect article 27 of the Mexican constitution, which the governments of Great Britain, France and the United States have declared "configactory." Since August 12, 1918, permits have been refused to companies which have not filed "manifestations" or entered into contracts with the Mexican government, The terms of such contracts have not yet been defined. As a result, drilling operations, building of pipelines and other development has been stopped.

The point made by the three governments interested has been consistently that the companies did not need permits to operate, because they had acquired their lands in good faith by purchase or lease in accordance with the cuisting laws of Mexico.

Whether any action will be taken by this government in the present case, as and yet been decided, it was said today; but the ceiling prevails in official circles that this order of the department of industry in Mexico City is a means of forcing the companies to accept the confiscatory features of de-Subsequent decrees were announced each intending to put into effect arti-

DECLARED SERIOUS

Appeals Sent to Men on Point of Demobilization to Return and Save Their Comrades.

LONDON, March 25.—(By the Associated Press.)—Defending the military service bill in the house of commons today, Winston Spencer Churchill, secretary for war, declared that the whole retary for war, declared that the whole of Egypt was in virtual state of insurrection. The position was so dangerous, he added, that the government had to appeal to men on the point of demobilizing to return and save their comrades from being murdered.

This declaration by the war secretary was brought about by the remarks of Sir Donald MacLean, who said that Great Britain was grossly overinsured with respect to the strength of the army.

Situation Held Serious.

Mr. Churchill asked if he followed what was taking place in almost every country at the present time and, if so, how could be say that there was over-nsurance in keeping 900,000 men for every purpose, including ten divisions on the Rhine and four divisions in the home country, less than the number kept here in the peaceful days before

Only three days ago, continued the secretary, a situation developed in Egypt which was of very far-reaching danger and which made it necessary to appeal to the men who were collected at various ports for demobilization to go back and help their comrades and save them from being murdered. Insurrection Is Feared.

The whole of Egypt was virtually in a state of insurrection.

Had Sir Donald read of what was taking place on the Black sea, in Hungary and on the whole frontier of those small states which were guaranteed protection by the league of nations? Sir Donald had said, continued the secretary, that the German army was to be reduced to 100,000 men and that the Germans were to have no boy scouts. That, the speaker asserted, was what the allies were going to demand. But had the Germana agreed to it? Was there any chance of their agreeing to it, if the allies divested themselves of all their forces at the present time? Sacrifices Are Recalled.

"The government," said the secretary, "have to face the real facts. If we squandered our forces at present time before our terms are secured, with European conditions of increasing gravity and perplexity, then we would throw away with both hands all the results gained by the sacrifice of millions of our men during four years."

The liberal opposition had proposed

The liberal opposition had proposed a series of amendments to the military service which Mr. Churchill declared were intended to wreck the bill. There was no truth in the accusation that the government had not tried the voluntary system. The government had tried and would try every means us-der the voluntary system.

Voluntary Army Proposed. Objection was taken to men being nvited to re-enlist for as long as two, three and four years. But unless men were secured for those periods it would were secured for those periods it would be impossible to relieve territorial and other troops in India and clsewhere who ought to have effective relief. He thoroughly agreed that the gov-ernment must do everything possible to recreate a voluntary army at the carliest possible moment.
