Members of the Portland Golf club have organized what is known as the Capital Sport Company, Limited.

Golfing Gossip.

FIRST and second holes at the Portland Golf club take care of 32 players. This is an important feature, as practically all golfers upon their arrival at the first tee feel that they must get away at once or their game will be thrown off.

No circumstances that you are ever likely to meet with on an inland course will make the cut-back pitch impossible, as it is necessary for the player, therefore, to do it himself to perfect his masher pitches.

The 16th hole, which is a dog leg with the green on an island, calls for the best golf that any player can produce, as it is necessary for the player to place his drive on a narrow neck of land with water hazards on both sides and the slightest deviation of the line of flight will penalize the player two strokes.

The 11th hole is perhaps the best mental hazard in the northwest. The tee is placed 200 feet above the green with a carry over a bog to the green. The hole is 150 yards long, but from its height looks much more and even the good player is much in doubt as to just what club to use as a strong wind which usually blows across this gully calls for a well-placed shot to stay on the green.
