

WOMEN CAST ADRIFT BY MUSLEM MASTERS

Thousands Forced to Leave Turk Harems Destitute.

HARD PROBLEM PRESENTED

Many Christian Women and Children Crazed by Hunger Now Wandering About Asia Minor.

NEW YORK, April 17.—(Dispatches from Constantinople received today by the American committee for Armenian and Syrian relief reported that the problem presented by the release of thousands of Christian women and children from Turkish harems in Asia Minor is constantly growing. Many have been given shelter by the relief workers, but there remain a large number wandering about the country destitute, some of them crazed from hunger and exposure.

Telegrams have been received in Constantinople from Gregorian bishops, pastors and leading business men in various sections of Asia Minor appealing for help for these women and children. The Turks, the message said, were casting about for ways to get them had taken into their homes and orphanages for the purpose of bringing them up as Moslems, believing that by thus setting them free they themselves might be able to escape punishment.

RIOTING ENDS JOYOUS DAY

Demonstrations in Cairo Greatest Ever Seen in Egypt.

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

(Copyright by the New York Herald Company. Published by Arrangement.) CALIRO, April 17.—(Special Cable.)—With the killing of two British soldiers by a mob and the death of four natives in the clash which followed a new crisis has developed in Cairo. The situation is fraught with danger. Only the strongest kind of repressive measures will serve to restore order.

In this connection I am authoritatively informed that General E. H. H. Allenby, British high commissioner for Egypt, is prepared to put such measures into effect. He will issue a proclamation establishing an iron rule if the disturbances continue.

Apparently the conciliatory measures adopted by General Allenby immediately upon his arrival in Cairo have failed to bear the good fruit at first expected. In fact, it generally is believed that the recent disorders grew out of them.

Three mammoth demonstrations—the greatest ever known in the east—occurred. Indeed, they might be regarded as one demonstration, lasting 48 hours. They were decidedly nationalist in character and thousands of persons participated in them. Veiled women, Bedouins from the desert and from the cities, well-to-do merchants and fellahs elbowed each other and shouted in wild enthusiasm as they paraded the streets of Cairo with flying banners, wild shrill cries and wilder songs and shouts for liberty. The real trouble did not come until later.

The great demonstration was over General Allenby's proclamation, saying:

"Now that order has in great measure been restored in Egypt, I have agreed with his highness the sultan, that there be no more restriction on travel. Egyptians who wish to leave the country are free to do so. Further, I have decided that Said Zakiul Pasha and his three companions shall be released from internment and accorded similar freedom of movement to that enjoyed by all Egyptians."

The result of this proclamation was a popular demonstration that vied with the armistice celebrations in American cities the size of Cairo. Mobs jammed the streets in front of Sheppard's hotel and cheered for Great Britain and everything.

Every vehicle, including on wheels, was commandeered. The demonstrators, aboard these vehicles, afoot and on horseback, were in every principal street and side street. They had flags, branches of trees and every imaginable thing to wave. Finally some of them took off their coats and other garments and waved them.

Veiled women for the first time mingled with the demonstrators and joined their shrill cries with those of the men and women from the desert joining hands in the streets and on carts and danced the desert dances, leaping, shouting, prancing and waving their arms.

It was a sight such as Cairo, and not even Alexandria, ancient city of health and demonstrations, never saw before. Indeed, it was incredible that such a demonstration should have occurred in the east.

Early in the demonstration I was recognized by some of the demonstrators as a Herald and The Oregonian correspondent. I was unable to escape the mob, and for two hours they surrounded me and held me, meanwhile giving the papers such a demonstration as no other newspapers ever got. Cries of "Long live President Wilson!" "Long live America!" assailed my ears, as the surging, seething mob overwhelmed me. They showed me with flowers. Then they overpowered my carriage and lifted me bodily from it. They placed me on the shoulders of two strong Egyptians and bore me about the city with the temper of the mob was excellent. They were in love with the world and Egypt in particular.

The spirit of the mob showed a change before the next day was done. It was an ominous looking crowd, perhaps a little larger than that of the day before. Again the streets were full of men and women and children and dogs. All classes were represented. There were native officials, farmers, merchants, Bedouins and again the veiled women doing barbaric dances. Automobiles, carriages, wagons and carts blocked the streets. Rabbits,

Men--Most Extraordinary Tie Sale of the Season--Here Today

—They came to us this way: —Our new furnishings chief, in placing his initial order for ties with the finest American tiemaker, asked for a sale to "start off" his section.

—The maker readily agreed, and together they went out, bought the finest tie silks that money could buy, and then had them made up at a price LOWER than the cost of the silks.

—Sounds strong, does it not? —Well, take a little stroll around town, look in the windows, THEN SEE OURS.

—You won't have to be a judge and jury to see that these $1.65 ties are BETTER than ties selling elsewhere at double and more.

—Finest American silks, finest American make; broadcades, basket weaves and the like, in figured, flowered and fancy effects; spring shades and spring shapes.

—You may see others flaunt ties of "estimated" (?) worth at a few cents less than these, but these are unmatched at any price, for the pattern, the make, the quality is here only.

priests and imams rode in the same carriage, were halted by the same mob and cheered alike. They had flags, and the cross and the crescent waved side by side, borne by men who now were forgetful of old wars wherein the followers of one banner assailed with lance and battle axe those of the other until the whole land was dyed red. The enthusiasm of the mob grew to frenzy. It was one great joyous delirium of patriotism, somewhat surly at times and always pregnant with trouble. However, hours passed without a clash with the British troops, and meanwhile the shouting and the clapping of hands continued with the repeated acclaiming of Egyptian nationality. It would be impossible to overstate the fervor, the magnitude, the very joyousness of the mass of the demonstrators. So it was until near midnight. Then, as the demonstrators were about to go to their homes, a British officer became involved in a difficulty with an Egyptian soldier. The clash was not long in coming. British Tommies hastened to the rescue of the officer and the mob rallied to the side of the Egyptian soldier. The mob charged and the British Tommies leveled their rifles and fired. Four Egyptians were killed. From a joyous, enthusiastic mob, immediately the seething mass of Egyptian and Arab humanity became mad. The British troops charged and real fighting followed.

BIG STRIKE IS NOT FEARED Mayor Hanson Says He Will Be Back on Job Saturday.

SEATTLE, April 17.—Labor leaders said today they did not believe any action toward a general strike would be taken at a meeting called by the Central Labor council for Sunday to consider a general walkout here to help union longshoremen obtain recognition which they say is at present denied them. The longshoremen allege employers are endeavoring to establish open-shop conditions on the waterfront.

REDDING, Cal., April 17.—Mayor Ole Hansen of Seattle said here today he had no fear of a general strike in Seattle because of longshoremen's difficulties. "I will be back on the job Saturday," he added.

PEACE HOLIDAY IS SOUGHT

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICAN REVOLUTION COMMEND LANE.

Cutting Down of Chapter Representation Defeated by Women After Spirited Fight.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The National society, Daughters of American Revolution, refused today to cut down chapter representation at the annual meetings, and in its effort to revise the constitution left the attendance section precisely where it stood 28 years ago. This decision was not reached without a spirited fight in which the smaller chapters opposed any change in the general system of attendance. Under the present system, New York state has the greatest voting power in the congress with 240 accredited delegates, Massachusetts being second with 164. Some of the smaller western states have only two delegates each. The Daughters adopted resolutions commending the efforts of Secretary Lane toward promotion of Americanization and eradication of illiteracy and endorsing his project which will be sent again to congress to provide home sites on public lands for fighting men. The resolution calling for closer relations between America and England was adopted.

EFFICIENT ARMY IS AIM

(Continued From First Page.) they went to the disciplinary barracks, probably to be restored to service if they were worthy of restoration. It was the lesson involved.

"When exact justice interferes with the building up of the army exact justice must be sacrificed." "Some Improvement Possible." "There is, of course," Major MacDonald added, "some room for improvement. There always is in any system of law or taxation; but the present army justice system is a very efficient machine. We have felt that we could attend to the question of exact justice after the war."

The officer submitted a record of 174 general court cases tried at Camp Sherman. He called attention to one sentence of 25 years imposed on a man who refused to obey a lawful order from an officer. On the face of the record, he said, the sentence seemed excessive, but that it was justified by facts and as reviewing judge advocate he had regretted only that the prison term had not been longer. Explaining the case he said the soldier had been ordered to work at the base hospital on a Saturday during the influenza epidemic and had refused on account of religious scruples, alleging he was a member of a faith that set that day aside for worship. On that particular Saturday, the officer said, there had been 140 deaths at the hospital and there were hundreds of very sick men to be cared for. Both General Glenn and Major MacDonald insisted that the circumstances of any case must be fully known before it could be determined that the sentence was excessive. Both opposed suggestions that radical changes in court-martial procedure were necessary or that any large infusion of men trained in civil law into the military establishment was necessary. Every accused man was surrounded now with checks to safeguard his rights, they asserted. The opposing views held in the service will be available to the committee next Monday, when Lieutenant-Colonel Samuel T. Ansell, former judge advocate-general and the leading figure in the criticism that has been directed against the court-martial system, will appear.

---Daily Comparative Price Advertising is Downright Lying!

—Excerpt of a speech by Edward L. Greene of the Better Business Commission of Cleveland, Ohio, at a meeting of the advertising men and women and ready-to-wear buyers at the Cleveland Advertising Club. Continuing, Mr. Greene said:

—“Comparative prices are the cause of most of this wildcat advertising,” he says. “I call them this because that is what they call wild mining schemes, and these are in the same class.

—“Everyone is apt to let their enthusiasm run away with them once in a while, but when they get on doing it every day it is downright lying.”

—To illustrate his point, Mr. Greene showed several examples of advertising which had recently appeared in Cleveland papers and which represented his idea of good and bad advertising.

—Several of these were advertising $45 and $50 suit values at $25.

—“Everyone knows that this is the big suit season, and if those suits were actually worth $50 you'd be asking every cent of the $50 for them, but they aren't, and you know it. You all go to New York and are all offered practically the same lines, and there isn't one of you that can legitimately give such values right along at that much of a reduction in the best part of the season.”

—Cocktail advertising is what it really is, according to Mr. Greene, who says that the first time you offer such things you give them one drink, but the next time you have to give them two in order to satisfy them, and so on, until you have increased the drinks to such an extent that you have drunken people to deal with, and everyone knows you can't carry on a legitimate business with drunkards.

Says people don't believe ads.

—That people have gotten so that they don't believe advertisements, was pointed out by a representative of the Ames Company (of Cleveland), who told of an experience he had with a sale of dresses which were formerly marked $30 and were put on sale one day at $25. When he asked one of the salesgirls at the end of the day why she thought they hadn't sold she said it was because when a woman saw a dress for $25 marked down from $45 or $50 she figured that perhaps the dress was really worth $30 or $35, but when there was only a small discount she decided she wasn't saving anything.

Inasmuch as Lipman, Wolfe & Co. Have Eliminated Comparative Prices for Years, They Believe the Public Should Know the Above Opinion —Not alone because they have pioneered in the movement in this section and are happy to see their policy indorsed, but because they see hereabouts frequent violations of all fair comparisons in the use of extravagant comparative prices—or rather “downright lying”—by large institutions supposedly conducted on fair, equitable, ethical lines.

—A comparative price is misleading, and often untrue; it cannot be otherwise—so this store does not use them.

—There is only one basis of comparison for price, and that is the lowest selling price in the city on a similar article. Thus if a store advertises a shirt as a $4, $5, $6 and even $7 value that is no better than shirts that can be bought regularly at $3.85 in other stores, someone is having it “put over” on them.

—On the same principle this store, or any other store that does not use comparative prices, may hold a sale of an article—say handkerchiefs (the value of which is difficult for a layman to determine)—at a price less than the present wholesale cost, and then is immediately subjected to this lying comparative competition.

—An outlandish value is placed on the article by the competitor with his comparative price, when analysis will show that the sale in the store that merely invites patronage on merit offers better values.

—All of which is another way of saying that the shopping public should “watch their step” and beware of the store that continually uses extravagant comparative prices.

—Nor are we “tooting our own horn,” for all this store asks is a fair inspection of its merchandise at any time—“sale” or no “sale”—with so-called “cut-price” merchandise elsewhere.

—This store does, however, believe that the “sting-the-unwise” policy in business ought to be brought to light, knowing that the average American is enough of a thinker not to “fall” again.
