NEW UNIFORMS IN NAVY

THREE OFFICERS APPEAR IN DOUBLE-BREADED COATS.

More Comfortable Collars and Pockets Will Be Afforded American Sea Commanders.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—(Special.)—The first of the new navy officers' uniforms with double-breasted coats, appeared on the streets of San Francisco today.

Three officers have the honor of wearing them on the coast for the first time. They were Ensigns J. A. Scott and A. A. Antrim of the pay corps, and Lieutenant R. Southern of the line.

All are stationed at Goat Island. The new coat is similar to that worn by chief petty officers of the navy.

Aside from being more comfortable than the former uniform with stiff brass buttons and hidden buttons, the new coat has three pockets, one over the left breast and two on either side.

One feature of the new outfit is that the double-breasted collar may be worn instead of the high standing collar made necessary by the cut of the old coat.

and the four-in-hand black tie is brought into use.

Even if they were to withdraw, it is not believed the other powers would let all their work go for nothing simply because Italy runs a claim which could not be sustained on any principle of international justice.

Arthur Henderson, leader of the British labor party, passing through Paris en route for the international labor executive meeting in Amsterdam, speaking today to the World correspondent on the Italian question, said:

"If the Italian government should break away on this issue, the domestic situation in that country will become aggravated for the party hostile to the government. The socialists will not approve of such a course. In fact, from what I know, I would not be surprised if the government were to be replaced in Italy in favor of president Wilson, in their own country."

Unofficially the opinion prevails that while the Italians may keep on declaring their threat to withdraw, there will be no occasion to borrow trouble over that prospect until the threat shall become effective and they shall really have gone from here.

TWO BAKEMEN CONVICTED

Liquor Taken From "Tourists" Leads to Arrest and Trial.

EUGENE, Or., April 24.—(Special.)—Oscar Head and Ralph Hunsaker, Southern Pacific brakemen, were found guilty by a jury at Junction City today of receiving and having in their possession liquor in violation of the prohibition law and were fined $50 each. They gave notice of appeal to the circuit court.

William Larkin, who says his home is in Portland, and a companion, after beating their way from California with 23 quarts of liquor, got off a freight train at Junction City and according to Larkin's testimony were followed into the brush by Head and Hunsaker, who impersonated officers and compelled the other two men to give up their liquor. According to Larkin's testimony, they later found out their mistake and swore out a warrant for the arrest of the railroad men. A search warrant was sworn out and some of the liquor found, with the result that the brakemen were convicted.

The site has already been secured and more land is available if needed, and it is thought it will be an industrial spur which will be run to the plant and as it will be on the Columbia river, will have both rail and water transportation on a parity with Portland rates.

REPROACH OF EX-KAISER EMBITTERS

Field Marshal Mackensen is still loyal to the ex-Kaiser, according to Edgar von Schmidt-Eskil, the novelist, who describes as one of the most dramatic of his experiences his last interview with the old soldier, now interned in the Countess Karolyi chateau, to which he was forcibly transported.

During the interview the venerable field marshal paced the large drawing room of the chateau, the rays of sunlight playing upon the order pour la merite on his breast. Every time he turned toward the window he acted as if he felt he were bound in a cage, and that is evidently his feeling toward the chateau, although the Countess Karolyi, cousin of the ex-premier and one of the most beautiful women in Hungary, is there and does all she can to make him forget his situation, inviting him to bridge and for horseback riding and entertaining him in every way possible.

Revolution Puzzles Warrior.

The grizzled warrior has not yet comprehended what the revolution means. He complained bitterly that he had been completely forgotten in Germany, and his soldierly temperament was roused to resentment over the fact that he is a prisoner in the country which his troops had freed.

"I cannot get over the thought that the Hungarians broke their word of honor with me," he complained. "Despite Karolyi's assurance that he would transfer my quarters quietly from Arad to Papp, my locomotive was run to Budapest by Hungarian drivers. At the Budapest station I received the word of honor of the Hungarian major, in the name of Count Karolyi, that I could board my train again unmolested, but I was nevertheless informed at the ministry that I would be interned in Budapest."

"I did not hesitate to show my indignation and declined to remain there in the neighborhood of the French. Then came the Budapest revolution. I was taken to the chateau at Forth, to which I had to accede, under compulsion and protest."

Reproach of Ex-Kaiser Embitters.

The field marshal was greatly embittered by reproaches directed against the ex-Kaiser. "If anyone knows the Kaiser, I do," he said. "I know it was ever his hope to enter his eternal rest as the peace Kaiser and I know how sorrowfully he made his decision for war."

Shortly after this conversation the Karolyi chateau was melodramatically surrounded by a French force which guarded all the exits. The field marshal refused to appear until these sentries had been withdrawn. Arabs then searched the place for four days, when the French commandant appeared and announced that the field marshal must be ready to travel within an hour, threatening force to compel him to do so.

Despite the protest of the field marshal's chief of staff, General von Mackensen was carried by the automobile to the station where a train awaited him and his officers. The declared destination was Salonica, but instead the train went into southern Hungary to the chateau of Count Chotek.

Barbed Wire Guards Chateau.

The place was now men in wire entanglements and the marshal was not permitted to communicate with any of the people of the vicinity. He received his mail only through a French courier. The internment measures relaxed and the barbed wire removed. Now he is permitted to ride horseback.

He is separated from his family. Without definite news of events in the fatherland, the once brilliantly-victorious general remains a prisoner. He is almost the last of his entire army. He has refused to quit Hungarian soil until all of his soldiers had been transported back to Germany.

INTERNAL TROUBLE FEARED

Labor Leader Declares Break on Issue May Lead to Agitation Against Government.

BY JAMES M. TUOHY. (Copyright by the New York World. Published by Arrangement.)

PARIS, April 24.—(Special cable.)—Judging by the stupefied manifestations in Italian headquarters today when President Wilson's Adriatic statement appeared, the Italians must really have been banking on the presumption that his attitude was that of bluff and would never materialize in this absolutely uncompromising form. When asked what action he would take, Premier Orlando replied:

"I may decide to lay the whole matter before the Italian people or I may reply by an act."

Meaning presumably that the "act" would be withdrawal from the conference. Premier Orlando was engaged in session with the Italian delegates on a proposal made by Premier Lloyd George when the president's statement was brought to him. The Italians have been counting on bringing the conference to an impasse.

Even if they were to withdraw, it is not believed the other powers would let all their work go for nothing simply because Italy runs a claim which could not be sustained on any principle of international justice.

Arthur Henderson, leader of the British labor party, passing through Paris en route for the international labor executive meeting in Amsterdam, speaking today to the World correspondent on the Italian question, said:

DIVERS CONTINUE SEARCH

BODY OF MISSING GIRL IN SEATTLE NOT YET FOUND.

Prints of Girl's Bare Feet Leading Down to Lake Washington Lead to Belief in Drowning.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 24.—While assistants worked in shifts at the air pumps, divers continued their search at the bottom of Lake Washington for the body of Eva Apple, 24, who is believed to have drowned herself in the vicinity of the lake city home of her sister, Mrs. S. D. Clauson, about 2 A. M. Tuesday.

Although divers were made several times Thursday morning no trace of the missing body was found.

Deputies who followed the prints of the girl's bare feet from the Clauson house to the lake shore and ascertained that they did not turn back into the woods say they are certain she has drowned herself.

Eva Apple came from Spokane Sunday. She was in a state of sickness and melancholy at the time of her disappearance. Her sister, Ruth Apple, is a nurse at the Swedish hospital.

Deputies dragged the lake Tuesday and Wednesday. The diver was employed because it was thought the body might have caught on a snag at the bottom of the lake.

PHONOGRAPH STARTS FIGHT

Playing on Sunday Excites Wrath of Bend Landlady.

BEND, Or., April 24.—(Special.)—Because Mrs. Ruth Haley, who rented a room from her, played the phonograph on Sunday, Mrs. Bertha Phipps, owner of the house, called down the vengeance of the Lord upon the offender for her wickedness. Mrs. Phipps told Police Judge Peoples here this afternoon. From that time, both women admitted, trouble existed. At the end of the hearing, each was placed under $25 bonds to keep the peace. Mrs. Phipps was arrested on the complaint of Mrs. Haley, who alleged that her landlady had attacked her with a toaster fork.
