

SPEAKERS TO BOOST FOR STATE MEASURES

Campaign for Special Election Opens Monday.

ALL OREGON TO CO-OPERATE

Roosevelt Highway, Irrigation Bills and Reconstruction Measures Included on Ballot.

General campaigning for measures on the ballot at the special election June 3 will begin in earnest next Monday. This will give the campaigners two weeks in which to educate the public on the various measures and the state will be covered by speakers. There is a sort of co-operative agreement among the various campaign committees to the end that each one is doing what it can to help the others.

Four measures will have organizations behind them. These are the reconstruction bill, the Roosevelt highway measure, the irrigation programme and the market road tax.

Until a few days ago the Roosevelt highway was the only measure which was being given any amount of publicity, but the irrigationists and the reconstruction committee are rapidly perfecting organization. The market tax bill is being taken up by the grangers throughout the state, resolutions having been adopted favoring this 1-mill tax to build farmer roads.

Speakers will make the field next week and will be kept moving until the eve of the election. Practically accessible sections of Oregon will be invaded by the flying squadrons. A group of Roosevelt highway speakers will take to the trail Monday and will swing through central and eastern Oregon.

They will pick up along the route various prominent citizens as boosters. Later the Willamette valley will be covered. A crowd of speakers interested in the development of central and eastern Oregon are booked to invade Portland and the Willamette valley and they will appear before civic bodies in the Rose City.

Speakers for the reconstruction programme are now being selected and they will take the stump next week, while publicity for the reconstruction measure will be broadcast.

Whole State to Co-operate. It was early agreed between the advocates of the Roosevelt highway and the irrigationists that in union there is strength. We advocates are personally interested in irrigation, but it does not directly benefit by the highway, but neither will the water it can get. This being the case, the men behind these measures agreed that reciprocity would be a good thing and that the highway and the irrigation projects are of general benefit to Oregon.

In all the speeches heretofore made for the Roosevelt highway or the irrigation measure, the reconstruction programme has been advocated as it links into the policy of developing the state. There is no rivalry among the committees and they are working together harmoniously and energetically.

Clark Letter in Charge. Clark Letter, state executive manager for the reconstruction measure, has engaged headquarters in the Morgan building, where Monroe Goldstein will establish the publicity bureau. Senator B. L. Eddy, chairman of the state committee, will devote a large part of his time to the campaign. J. D. Etheridge has been designated as chairman of the speakers' bureau. There will be a chairman for a speaker's bureau in every town and the ministers will probably be called on to aid on Sunday, June 1. Aid is expected from the churches and all speakers will be sent out to reach as many gatherings as possible.

S. C. Pier, president of the Roosevelt highway association, is now in northern Oregon holding meetings, and Monday Ben Jones, secretary of the association and father of the measure, will go east of the Cascades with Senators T. B. Handley, A. W. Norblad, J. C. McCue and others.

Among the irrigationists who will open a speaking campaign are Senator Julian Hurley, Representatives A. A. Smith and P. J. Gallagher and Jay Upton, president of the irrigation congress.

and the acting is exceedingly natural, which is one of its principal joys. A mental marvel named George Lovett offers a novel turn called "Concentration," in which he is assisted by two clever girls, one a psychic wonder and one a musical oracle, who answer requests from the audience. The psychic wonder replies to questions, while the musical oracle plays on request any selection called for. The act holds mystery, thrills and novel entertainment.

Gertrude Graves, an attractive vocalist, whose voice is a delightful coloratura soprano of operatic quality, pleases greatly with her offerings. Most Infield and Vera Nobis are a pair of clever entertainers, presenting odds and ends of what is best in vaudeville and winning much applause with their original ways.

The two Edwards, a chap and a girl, are shooting stars and provide plenty of excitement with their sharpshooting exhibition. Waldstein and Daly are graduates in the art of roller skating and present many new comedy ideas and acrobatic turns in their novel act. The photoplay features happy Gloria Joy in "No Children Wanted," which is of timely appeal and extremely interesting.

OLD POLICE FEUD REVIVED

SERGEANT SLAPS AND ARRESTS CHINESE MERCHANT.

Oriental Is Dismissed by Court and Proceeds to Swear Out Warrant Against Officer.

A popping, open-handed slap, delivered with intent and vigor, is sufficient punishment for the use of abusive language to a policeman, ruled Municipal Judge Roseman yesterday, when Lee Foo, a Chinese merchant, was arraigned in the city court on the charge of having vilified Sergeant Robson. Accordingly the court dismissed the case against Foo.

But Foo wasn't through with the matter. Protesting that there is none of meek celestial about his make-up, the indignant merchant hastened from Second and Oak to the district court, where he procured a warrant for the arrest of Sergeant Robson, charging him with assault and battery.

The feud between Sergeant Robson and Lee Foo is said to be an old one. The merchant's place of business is at 31 North Fourth street, and has frequently been under suspicion of being a lottery parlor. Three years ago, when Sergeant Robson walked that particular beat, he is said to have quarreled with Foo. So bitter is their bickering alleged to have been that Sergeant Robson was removed to another district.

The other day the sergeant visited North Fourth street. Foo, pacing the walk before his imported goods store, he charged with obscenity, a lottery game and with being the "look-out." At this the merchant fluently discussed his theory of Sergeant Robson's ancestry. It is said, and the arrest follows—but not before the incensed sergeant had "taken a slap" at his tormentor.

Foo was booked on a dual charge of vagrancy and abusive language. The former charge failed to hold, as Foo testified that he had $7000 worth of stock in his store, and that during the past few years he had paid $150,000 in import duty on choice merchandise from China. He offered to prove his assertions.

PORTLAND MOVES TO SECURE INDUSTRIES

Commission of Fifteen Named by Mayor Baker.

FIRST MEETING DATE SET

Municipally-Controlled Sites Proposed as Means of Attracting Important Enterprises.

The commission of 15 men to investigate and report on a comprehensive plan for industrial development in Portland, with special regard to municipally controlled industrial sites, was named yesterday by Mayor Baker. The commission was authorized by a resolution adopted recently by the city council, following submission of a plan for the development of the Columbia river stough for a huge industrial site by Commissioner Mann. The commission appointed by Mayor Baker will not only investigate this proposal, but will delve into and report on every possible project which might be developed in the interest of industrial growth to the city.

The commission includes Max H. Houser, Joseph Bowles, Nathan Strauss, Eric V. Hansen, Ira F. Powers, Emory Olmstead, J. E. Jaeger, F. C. Knapp, J. C. English, William Cornfoot, C. E. Dant, J. P. Newell, Otto Hartwig, W. B. Fletcher and E. S. Doornbecker.

Committee to Organize. The commission will elect its own chairman and Mayor Baker has suggested that an executive committee of five be selected, from among members of the commission, to carry on the detail work and prepare it for hearings of the entire commission.

In a letter of appointment sent to each member of the commission, Mayor Baker outlines the plan in detail. This letter is as follows:

"In accordance with a resolution adopted by the city council, I am appointing you a member of a committee of 5 to take up and formulate a comprehensive plan of industrial development with special regard to municipally-controlled industrial sites which can be made available in inducing industrial interests to locate in Portland. The survey also will cover the general subject of industrial development, including port and dock improvements and development of industrial plants, shipping, trade, etc.

Vacancy Investigation Sought. This committee is intended as an organization to prepare a comprehensive plan which can be followed by private interests, as well as public interests, for the general rebuilding and improvement of the city. In selecting the committee I have made a special effort to name men who I believe have the interests of the city as a whole at heart, and who have no other interests to serve, either directly or indirectly. For selfish interests, either regarding persons, organizations or localities, to influence any of the plans of this committee, would result in failure of the general plan.

"I will appreciate an early reply from you stating whether you will be willing to serve on this committee. I know of no bigger work for the people of Portland now than the establishment, as quickly as possible, of a policy and comprehensive plan of development, which will enable this city to take advantage of the vast opportunities presenting themselves to cities and communities prepared to handle them."

The first meeting of the commission will be held in the mayor's office Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, May 20, when organization will be effected preparatory to beginning work.

JUDGES' MEETING CALLED

JURISTS TO CONSIDER CANDIDATES FOR NEW POST.

Names of Three for Court of Domestic Relations Court to Be Submitted to Governor.

Judges of the circuit court will confer at 5 o'clock tomorrow concerning the selection of three men to be recommended to Governor Olcott for the position of the newly created judge of the court of domestic relations. The session will be behind closed doors, and the result may not be given out for several days. The call for the meeting was sent out by Presiding Judge Stapleton yesterday.

It is not expected that a final selection of the three men will be made at the conference tonight, for the field of candidates is large. The hope of Judge Stapleton is to narrow down the field to about half a dozen so that the final selection may be made shortly. The judges will consider several men outside of those who have formal applications on file with the court. Several of the jurists are known to favor men for the position who have made no application for the position, but who are not expected to turn it down should it be offered them.

That the meeting will not be final is indicated by the fact that County Judge Taswell did not receive an invitation. By the time the final decision is made, May 29, Judge Taswell will be a circuit judge and will have a voice in the selection. That he will be consulted before that time is probable.

A HAPPY inspiration has led the Hippodrome management to book the clever pair, Virginia Thornton and Charles King, for another engagement. They have a repertoire of keen little playlets on tap, and for this week they have picked out one of their funniest, "Two of a Kind," featuring the fascinating Miss Thornton, as the wife; a talented chap named Victor Donald, as the husband, and Charles King, in a brilliant character gem, as the father. The comedy is rapid and clean-cut,
