

ORGY MARKS END OF SESSION IN HAWAII

Hula Songs Sung by Native Members Toward Close.

MAUDLIN MOTIONS MADE

Bottles Under Desks and in Waste Baskets Furnish Stimulants to Wild Scenes.

HONOLULU, T. H., May 1.—(By Mail.)—Scenes which rivaled some of the state legislature sessions in the south soon after the close of the civil war, when negroes were in power, were enacted in the house of representatives in the closing hours of the territorial legislature of Hawaii. The session concluded after 1 o'clock and was marked by a display of drunkenness and merriment interrupted by a number of the intoxicated members, some of whom had to be carried out after all too-frequent nips from bottles set under legislative desks.
Decorum and dignity were swept aside, and several of the boisterous members left the session with disgust plainly written on their faces. Three of the native members were hopelessly intoxicated before the session was over, while a number felt so gay towards midnight that they could not refrain from singing hula songs in an undertone, while the frowning speaker endeavored to maintain order so that the pressing business, such as the appropriation bill, could be passed on third reading.

Native Drink Is Imbibed.
Time and time again those under the influence of okolehao (a local drink that looks like gin and tastes like gin) persisted in their efforts to interrupt the work of the evening, playfully proposing absurd resolutions and motions. Time and again they arose and stayed over their desks to ask foolish questions. No matter what the answer, the question was invariably repeated, sometimes in Hawaiian, sometimes in English, and sometimes in pidgin English. One representative demanded that he be heard on a bill which had been long since passed, and had been signed by the governor. He threatened to step up on his desk the better to speak to the house, and attendants forced him into his chair again. On one occasion, when called to vote, he answered: "Oh, give me a glass of water this time." On another occasion, he got up and asked to "change my vote right about face." His comedy was the spur to the other intoxicated members and the excuse for their loud guffaws and continuous pounding of the desks in high glee.
Another morose sort of person, ate oranges steadily throughout the session, piling the peelings on his desk and questioning his thirst at intervals from a bottle which stood in his wastebasket, in full view of the visitors and the press gallery. Still another had an obsession for cigars and steadily to his feet and "raising a point of order" whenever possible.

Camp Follower Joins in Songs.
During the evening a political camp-follower, with a colorable jag and both hips well loaded, drifted into the visitors' gallery which abuts the desks of the members and aided the insurgents to sing hula songs in a undertone. The speaker had to argue with the disciples of John Barleycorn more than half a hundred times and remind them that the house was in session. Whereupon one of the members got up and moved that "the action of the house be abolished." On the whole, it was the most disgraceful orgy ever witnessed in island legislative halls and harkened back to the days of the monarchy when sessions of the house of nobles were accompanied by orgies of many kinds.

BIGGER COMMITTEE LIKELY

FIGHT FOR LARGER STEERING BODY IN HOUSE PROGRESSING.

Indications Are That Few Members Will Be Added, and Further Changes Are Possible.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, May 15.—With the arrival of Representative Longworth here this week conferences will be held by those members of the house, including Representative C. N. McArthur, who are seeking to enlarge the steering committee.

Reports for several days have indicated that the fight is virtually won and that the following representatives will be added, increasing the membership from six to ten: C. Bascom Slemmons, Virginia; Sidney Anderson, Minnesota; John L. Nolan, California; and C. Frank Reavis of Nebraska. The present members are: Samuel E. Winslow, Massachusetts; Thomas E. Duffin, New York; J. Hampton Moore, Pennsylvania; Nicholas Longworth, Cincinnati; Martin B. Madden, Chicago, and Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming.

The interesting question is whether the fight will stop at this. There is some disposition to make a fight on the confirmation of Representative Mondell as floor leader and it is possible that when the republicans meet in conference next Saturday night Representative Royal Johnson of South Dakota will nominate Representative Longworth in opposition to Mr. Mondell. The success of Mr. Longworth will depend altogether on whether the forces which elected Representative Frederick H. Gillett speaker at the next house can be held in line for the Ohio man.

ROAD CHANGE IS OPPOSED

Farmers on Southern Pacific Send Delegation to State Engineer.

EUGENE, Or., May 15.—(Special.)—Farmers who own land along the Southern Pacific track between Ormwell and Walker, where it is proposed to change the route of the Pacific highway from the east side of the track to the west side, to avoid two railroad crossings, are protesting against the change as they do not desire to have their farms cut up. A delegation called upon R. A. Booth, state highway commissioner and the county court yesterday to voice their protest, but was given little encouragement, as it is the policy of the commission to rebuild the highways wherever it is possible to eliminate railroad crossings. However, Mr. Booth promised the farmers that J. C. McLeod, assistant highway engineer, who has been working in this locality, will go over the land with them to see what can be done. According to the plan of the commission and the county court, there will be nearly five miles of new construction on the west side.
