Majestic.
SHE'S a fascinating young woman novelist, a cook and a butler's sweetheart—she's Constance Talmadge, sprightly and vivacious camera star, in her newest photoplay, "A Lady's Name."
Here's another delightful comedy for admirers of the popular "Conny," with a succession of amusing and exciting events showing the adventures of the young feminine novelist who advertises for a husband. Harrison Ford is the lucky chap who wins the girl, while Emory Johnson, Ella Hall's husband, former Universal star, is the unlucky one.
Mabel Vera, a writer, bored with her fiancée and seeking new material for a novel, advertises for a husband. One of the applicants is a butler, and Mabel, loving adventure, accepts an invitation to dine, the butler's master being away. Mabel discovers that she's poisoning on the cook's matrimonial preserves, a pretty squabble develops, and the authoress is forced to play coup upon the unexpected return of the master. That worthy proves to be one of the applicants, and she's the man who places the binding ring on her finger.
Comedy, Pathe Weekly and Screen Magazine are other subjects shown.

Sunset.
The Sunset Theater's week of Clara Kimball Young screen repertoire offers the beautiful Clara today in "The Road Through the Dark," a dramatic photoplay adapted from the story by Maud Haddock Warren.
Jack Holt, Eleanor Fair, Bobby Connelly, Lillian Leighton, Elmo Lincoln, Edward M. Kimball and Eugene's Bear are players who support Miss Young in this production, the story presenting her in the role of a beautiful French girl who sacrifices herself to save the people of her village from death.
