NEAR EAST ISSUE IS BATTLE OF CHARTS

Paris Misled by Many Kinds of Propaganda.

Attempt Made to Prove That Armenians Robbed and Massacred

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS. (Copyright by the New York Herald Com-pany, Published by Arrangement) CONSTANTINOPLE,—"Figures cannot lie, but liars can figure," is a cynicism perhaps too bald to apply to the diplomatic use of statistics in the near east, but anything less definite would not state the facts which confront an Bedrock to any permanent settlement of the near eastern question is the determination of what races and re-ligions occupy a given area and their celative proportions. If Greeks predom-nate in Thrace and Western Anatolia, they have a basis of claim to be awarded sovereignty there. So the Greek official figures show in great detail the numerical superiority of Hellenic population. No room is left for doubt or discussion. The case is closed, settled —"Feenish Johnny," as they say in Salonies statistics. For the Turks demonstrate utterly that the Greeks are so small a minority as to be insignificant.

Be it remembered, these are not the idle figurings of irresponsible zealots. They are prepared by responsible governments for presentation to the Paris commission. Yet each discredits the other.

And the traveler himself who goes over the ground in question is likely to discredit both. For a population claimed as Greek or Turkish may really be Bulgarian. So a district which armenians and Turks each call theirs may be Georgian, Kurdish, Greek or Syrian. A lover of euphemisms could safely say that the orient is the region of the inexactitude.

When the Turks put forth their printed-in-Germany tables they affect a fine show of impartiality by proving that the population of two or three islands—including Cyprus, which belongs to Great Britain—is predominantly Greek.

Did Armenians Massacre Turks? Credulity is taxed, however, when the official memorial addressed to the the official memorial addressed to the powers by the Ottoman government undertakes to show by statistics that the Armenians have within five years massacred more than 1,000,000 innocent Moslem men, women and children! In private conversation with me Turkish officials freely translate this into "millions." When I flatly told Rustim Bey, the one-time ambassador to Washington, that I did not believe these figures he was apparently astonished and took heard abroad. It is the complaint of adolescence, "Nobody understands me." If the truth were known, runs the reasoning, the Turks would be seen in the light of long-suffering victims of oppressive minorities! "No Turk ever massaged an unarmed man or a wommassacred an unarmed man or a wom-an or child," declared an English-speaking Turk to me, with the fire of conviction in his eye, as we sat at lunch in the Cercle d'Orient.

On my table at the moment as I write are two albums and a big, thick book showing by text and photographs all evidently prepared somewhere near northern terminus of the Berlin-Bagdad railway that the Armenians plotted, conspired, robbed, raped and massacred, and there are the portraits of the slain to prove it. The text attached to the pictures in the albums is in four languages, a bit of propaganda done with characteristic Teutonic thoroughness, although stamped with a Turkish seal.

Practically all these atrocities charged. against the Armenians are located in the Caucasus and in regions where I myself have traveled since the date of myself have traveled since the date of their alleged perpetration. A few other Americans, consuls and relief workers, have been in the same region, and by a coincidence these men during the last few days have been in Constantinopie; and I have talked with them about the charges made by the Turkish government. Likewise, I have inquired of the British experts. There are always one or more British experts upon every bit of the earth's surface, if one may only get at them.

In this case the extreme figures to be debited against the Armenians are unofficially British; namely, that not more than 25,000 Moslems have been massacred by Armenians within the last five years. Even that is rather an appalling total, but it must be set

To return to the theme of statistics!
One of the cruel and inhuman weapons that has come into general use in this war is the ethnographic chart. This is meant to show who's who and where in the disputed regions of the earth, like Alsace-Lorraine, the Balkans and Turkey. By colored dots, squares, stars and circle, it purports to tell the location and size of each racial group. The first of these vivid charts one encounters is most impressive. The fairness of it carries one away. Here is the truth at a glance.

Alas, that is only a first impression! For the very next ethnographic chart me they leave me stone cold. I attach more weight to the opinion of an honest man who has visited the regions in question than to all the ethnographic charts ever published.

Charts, tables, maps and observers all unite in making clear one basic condition in the Near East. This must be understood before a student can get anywhere with a solution of the problem. It is that races and religions are inextricably intermingled. A few square miles may contain distinctive villages of four or five contending flations or groups. Much more is it impossible—simply impossible—for the Paris commission or any other body to erect a line of division that will respect the racial and religious claims which are paramount here. Where the nations impinge there are no solid blocks of population that can be treated as unities.

The matter of a probable or possible strike was discussed and Miss Jean Richardson declared that the charters carried a no-strike clause. Miss Julia Spooner argued that if the unions supported the teachers they would expect something in return.

"If we are going to be fair and square, three months isn't too long for us to consider this matter," said Miss Spooner. "There are more than 600 of us. One hundred may know all about it. The other 500 may be like me and need information." She cautioned them against haste.
