

$1,000,000 IN ROAD BONDS WILL BE SOLD

Highway Commission Also Will Let Contracts for Work.

ASTORIA TO VOICE PROTEST

Clatsop County Delegation at Today's Meeting Will Urge That Road Work Be Hastened.

After $1,000,000 of road bonds have been sold this morning and contracts awarded on several hundred thousand dollars' worth of road work, the state highway commission will lean back in its collective chair and listen to Astoria's complaints. There will be many delegations at today's session, but so far as known Astoria is the only one sending representatives who will protest.

It appears that Astoria complains that the state highway commission isn't speeding up the completion of the lower Columbia river highway fast enough to suit Clatsop county. A delegation appeared before Chairman S. Benson Saturday and protested at the delay. To this Mr. Benson answered that the commission already has spent a million dollars to get a road to Astoria and that he, himself, after traveling over it, had to stop at the city limits and wade knee deep through mud to get into town, while he spent his car back to Clatskanie for the night. Also the delegation complains because in two years only about three miles of hard-surface have been laid on the Svenson section.

Bridge Is Wanted.

In particular, the Astoria delegation wants the state to build a new steel bridge across Young's bay and pave to Seaside. The commission is willing to help build the bridge with government aid, but the Astorians feel that government aid means delay, and they brook no delay in wanting the bridge built by the state, which means quicker action. A long-distance message was sent to the commission yesterday announcing that Astoria will be on the job at today's meeting.

Several delegations arrived yesterday to discuss informally their wants and expectations. A delegation from Yamhill county wants a new bridge across the gulch at the approach to the town of Newberg. The present structure is old and narrow and the traffic over it is immense. It was intimated that this bridge may have to be closed in a few weeks as a matter of safety. Yamhill county is thinking of following the example of Linn county and bidding on bridges in its county.

Crook Eager for Action.

To expedite the building of a road from Prineville up Crooked river, the crook county judge came to Portland yesterday. Crook county recently sold $90,000 worth of bonds to raise money for co-operation on the road, which will be a post road project and therefore will have to be approved by the government before the highway commission can act.

Dr. J. W. Donnelly of Arlington is in the city to urge that the John Day highway emerge via Arlington, from Condon instead of going from Condon toward Wasco. Fred Stanley of Deschutes county recently sold a delegation from that county is on the way to seek a definite location of the road between Bend and Redmond. Clackamas county will send a delegation to see about the building of a new bridge across the river at Oregon City, contending that the bridge is part of the Pacific highway and therefore the state should join in assisting in paying the cost. Marion county will have representatives on hand and so will most of the 13 counties which voted road bonds issues last week.

which will be the feature at the Peoples theater tomorrow, with Bert Lytell as the star, is the second of the clever Red Book Magazine stories from the pen of Jack Boyle to be made into screen plays by Metro. The first was "Boston Blackie's Little Tail," in which Mr. Lytell did splendid work. "Blackie's Redemption" is the story of a "gentleman crook" who desires to "go straight." He gives up his lawless pursuits and is about to marry the girl he loves, when he is arrested and sent to prison for a crime committed by others. How he makes his daring escape is one of the many thrilling incidents which will be revealed in the play and which is the means of his ultimate redemption. The clever cast supporting Mr. Lytell includes such artists as Alice Lake, Henry Kolker, Bernard Durning, Jack Donaghy, and the late Gertrude Short, Don Bailey, Wilton Taylor and Ah Tov. The direction was the work of John Ince and the production was under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger, director-general.

With the lifting of the port strike at Buenos Aires, resumption of the importation of film has again been made possible, and the shipment of William Fox productions have been resumed to both Argentine and Uruguay.

Faced with a censorship bill which would give one man the powers of an autocrat over films even before produced, New York City exhibitors attending in force a session of the general welfare committee of the board of aldermen on May 28, entered strenuous protest and have forced further consideration of the proposed measure by the production executive session.

As introduced the bill would make the license commissioner, who is appointed by the mayor, final arbiter of the censorship of films in New York. It provides for a fine of from $50 to $100, and confiscation of the film should one be given public showing without a permit. The fee for the permit would be $1.

than 75 years. And another famous English advertiser slogan, none other than our old friend: "Good morning, have you used Pear's soap?" is instantly recognized in seven languages, declares Mr. Beaton, and is also of venerable antiquity.

Hint on Confidence.

"Why, if these firms," said Mr. Beaton with great conviction, "would announce that they were putting a restorer on the market, wouldn't every baldheaded man in this audience—despite the fact that each has had sad experience with restorer that don't restore—buy a bottle as soon as he could get to the counter? He would. Confidence is engendered by firms like Mr. Beaton attacked with indignation the haphazard methods of American exporters in packing their goods, and insisted that away from home, far from the supreme egotism of American business men, our shippers are at a disadvantage because they frequently arrive in a haphazard manner, and that the recent communication of an Australian correspondent, this document asserted that a ton of broken machinery, miscellaneous exports were taken from a single vessel, and that the hold was strewn with corsets, cigars, spark plugs, stockings and other mercantile miscellany—the wreckage of faulty packing by our exporters.

Into the afternoon session, when Rabbi Jonah B. Wise delivered a scathing address on "The Moral Side of Reconstruction," was injected a ruffled ten minutes of discussion, evoked by his observations regarding the attempted general strike at Seattle.

Press Gets Bumped.

The general strike, maintained Dr. Wise, had been misrepresented by the newspapers for alleged suppression of revolution or a move of the "isms" to seize the governmental reins of the Washington city. He censured the newspapers for alleged suppression of the truth about the strike, and declared that it was a legitimate labor demonstration. In proof of this Dr. Wise declared that the ring leaders, charged with being undesirable aliens, were released after being taken to New York, and acquitted after being returned to Seattle.

Dr. Wise asserted that newspapers do not afford sufficient correlated and coordinated facts to permit intelligent action of the general public. He charged the press with widely heralding many news stories which create issues, without turning publishing the facts when they are discovered.

An instance he called attention to the Seattle strike and to the current belief that the German navy was adequately equipped and prepared to lead the invasion of America, branding the published reports as false and misleading and asserting that later evidence has proved the fallacy of both. He charged the press with not giving similar prominence to the strike, which he held to be necessary.

In these assertions, said Dr. Wise, his interest was the advancement of the principle that "truth ought to be the dominant ideal in all our political and social programmes."

Quick Rejoinder Made.

Scarcely had Dr. Wise ceased speaking before Gordon C. Corbally, executive secretary of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, was on his feet in reply, saying that certain statements made by the publisher were so false and misleading that he was not permitted to go uncorrected.

The Seattle strike was a deliberate attempt to bring about the taking over of industry by a peaceful revolution," declared Mr. Corbally. "It was initiated by a small group of men who deceived themselves into believing that America would tolerate such things as have been done in Russia. These men systematically forced the general strike."

"The vote cast was so small that all thought the strike was abandoned until the radical leaders seized a meeting from which the real leaders of the Patterson, broker and realty dealer of Portland, was indicted by the Lane county grand jury today on the charge of setting fire to a warehouse at Alvadore to defraud an insurance company. Mr. Patterson was arrested on that charge several weeks ago, soon after the burning of the warehouse which was owned by the Alvadore Fruit Growers association.

Standard Oil Work Near McClips Is Proceeding Steadily.

ABERDEEN, Wash., June 9.—(Special.)—The car of machinery shipped to the Standard Oil company at McClips has been unloaded and skidded for the haul to the oil well site.

Included in the equipment are 13 drills of varied sizes. The boiler for the operation of the rig and the casing for the well have not arrived but it is believed they will be at hand by the time the derrick is assembled. Oil men say the equipment at McClips indicates that a heavy type of rig is to be used for this drilling.

metal trades council were absent, and food through a strike vote.

The little group that deliberately planned this deceived themselves into believing that they could so paralyze the President's labor and that the union would be able to take over the various industries and later on take over the government of the city itself.

Labor's Support Lacking.

"The movement did not have the support and sympathy of the thoughtful leaders of organized labor and the members of the union. This is proved by the fact that the general strike simply crumbled up and faded away when organized labor came to know the truth about the plans of the little group, more than one-half of whom were of alien birth.

"Any man who states that the Seattle general strike was not a deliberate attempt to bring about a peaceful revolution, through the abuse of power in the hands of men who have been wrongfully trusted by organized labor, is speaking without knowledge of the facts.

"Every man in Seattle, who knows the truth about the general strike, knows it best of all."

Big Question Raised.

William C. D'Arcy, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, and F. W. Kellogg, a Los Angeles publisher, and vice-president of the Pacific Coast Advertising Men's association, argued the benefits which would be derived by the members of the western association through a complete affiliation with the world organization.

"There are many corrections to be made in the national organization," President D'Arcy said, "but the members of the Pacific Coast Advertising Men's association hold the balance of power and can make these corrections if they so desire."

This affiliation is one of the important problems to be solved during the Portland convention. Heretofore nothing more than a friendly feeling has existed between the two organizations, and Mr. Kellogg, in a short talk, outlined the need of co-operation of all interested in advertising, so that highest success might be attained.

Readers Doubt "Ads."

"It took time," said Mr. Epstein, "to obtain truthful advertising. The better business bureaus have accomplished a great deal in ending this objective. We now must secure confidence in advertising, for without confidence truthful advertising is worth nothing."

Mr. Epstein told the delegates that a few years ago a test showed that 80 per cent of all advertising was not believed by the average reader. This represented a sheer waste, he said, provided the reason for organization of advertising clubs and resulted in increased effort for honest advertising the world over.

Pleanty of Fun Staged.

The remaining delegates who participated in this feature were J. T. Holden, secretary of the Sacramento Ad club; George T. Willard, Stockton Ad club; M. V. Moriarty, San Diego Ad club; J. L. Nelson, San Francisco Ad club; Tom M. Keane of the Spokane Ad club; Kenneth C. Kerr of Seattle Ad club and Harry L. Carroll of the Los Angeles Ad club.

Although a serious note was evident throughout the morning session, the club quartet, which entertained the session at every possible moment with songs, stunts and a bit of hilarity. Sessions of the ad men will be resumed in the auditorium of the Multnomah Hotel at 9 o'clock this morning.

honors in the debate on the topic "Why Industries Should Come to the Pacific Coast," and the splendid luncheon presided over by Charles F. Berg as chairman, and as president of the association.

The contest was a notable one, in which eight cities were represented by their brilliant forensic stars, especially entertaining because the speakers embraced in their presentation the larger aspects of the entire coast in claiming for the respective centers "What My Community Has to Offer." Each speaker was allotted five minutes and occupied the limit with forcible presentation of the reasons why his particular spot should be the center of population, industry and wealth, with health and the joy of living incidental to greatness thrown in for good measure.

Frank Butterworth won first honors for Los Angeles; R. E. Bigelow, Spokane, second prize; and H. C. Ayres, San Francisco, third prize. The other cities represented and the speaker for each were: Oakland, K. L. Hamman; Modesto, R. A. Cleveland; Pendleton, R. E. Garrett; Seattle, Kenneth C. Kerr, and Sacramento, Rev. Harvey Miller.

The insurance on the stock amounted to about 60 per cent of its value. The origin of the fire is not known.
