CENTENARIAN NEVER BICKERED WITH WIFE

Couple Live 67 Years Without Having Family Row.

HUSBAND CLAY'S DOCTOR

Physician Who Attended Statesman Believes Tobacco Is Aid to Digestive Process.

BRECKENRIDGE, Mo.—In Breckenridge is a man who has made it a lifelong practive never to quarrel or argue and never to speak ill of any person. And that man was 101 years old March 4. He is Dr. Joseph S. Halstead, who was Henry Clay's physician many years.

Despite his great age and his growing double handicap of blindness and deafness, Dr. Halstead's mind is very clear and his momery remarkable. His choice of words is excellent and well worthy of a man who was an intimate frfiend of the great Clay. The venerable physician loves to tell of Clay and his powers.

"There is no man equal to him in American public life today," he said.

"Yes, there is. President Wilson is," interrupted Mrs. Halstead, who is a warm admirer of the chief executive. But the doctor merely shook his head and waived further answer.

67 Years Without a Spat.

They never have quarreled, these two aged people, who have spent 67 years as man and wife. The usual family "spat" has been entirely unknown to them.

"We sometimes disagree a bit, but we never permit it to go to the extent of an argument or quarrel," Mrs. Halstead said. "That is one reason our love for each other is as great as it was when we were married.

Breckenridge residents will tell the visitor that they never have heard Dr. Halstead speak disparagingly of any man or woman. On the other hand, he seems always to find something good to say. This story is told of him:

"Doctor, I think you'll agree that not a thing can be said in this man's favor."

Some Good Even in Him.

The doctor pondered for a moment, then rejoined:

"I have always avoided discussion about religion and politics, the two chief subjects on which men disagree," Dr. Halstead said. "I have been keenly interested in them, but I have retained my own opinions and for the other man's right to have his, although they may differ from mine."

Dr. Halstead is no pacifist, though, despite his refusal to argue or quarrel. When a band of Union men attempted to run him off his farm near Breckenridge in the '60s, so that they might divide it among themselves, he refused to be intimidated. They left a note on his porch, giving him 24 hoours in which to quit the county. At the end of that time he was still on his farm and ready to defend it with arms.

Despite the fact that he was classified as a Confederate sympathizer in the civil war, Dr. Halstead was opposed to slavery. He left his old home in Kentucky to escape the enervating atmosphere bred by slavery.

"I wanted my boys to grow up with a respect for labor and a willingness to work, and in the slave-holding communities that was impossible," Dr. Halstead said. "That was one of the curses of slavery—it promoted false ideas about labor and made a leisure class out of the children of slave-holding families."

Dr. and Mrs. Halstead are the parents of eight children. They have in all 88 descendants. Only three deaths have occurred among their children's children and one of these was due to a train wreck and another to an operation. Their children are all sturdy and give promise of living to a great age.

Mrs. Halstead, who is not many years younger than her husband—she merely says she is "past 80"—does eh rown cooking and a part of her household work still. She is a splendid cook—her husband says so—and the splendid health he has maintained many years is a testimonial to this fact.

Dr. Halstead is an advocate of simpler foods. Especially he likes corn bread and mush and thinks them beneficial to the human system.

"People eat too much," he says. "Not onl ytoo much, but foods of too great a variety. I prefer corn bread with butter and milk to pie or cake."

Here Mrs. Halstead smiled and added: "I noticed you ate that piece of cherry pie with a good deal of relish yesterday evening."

"Yes, I eat pastry and enjoy it," said the doctor, "but I really prefer corn bread."

Dr. Halstead has smoked tobacco and chewed tobacco since he was 20 years old. He still enjoys his pipe very much.

"No, I don't think tobacco ever injured me," he said. "It probably is a useless and expensive habit; but it is an enjoyable one, and I always have had a theory—I don't know how true—that it was a beneficial stimulant and aid to the digestive processes."

Sickly as a Boy.

The doctor was not a strong youth. He was much given to the ills that affect children and not a few predicted in his boyhood that he would not live long. Moreover, during his days of practice as a physician he underwent all the strain and nardships that are a part of a doctor's life. Out late at night, driving many miles in the cold and wet, going without needed rest and sleep, these were a part of his routine existence for many years. He finally quit practicing and became a farmer, that he might be able to lead a life of more regular hours.

It was in 1841 that Dr. Halstead first come to Missouri. He rode on horseback from Lexington, Ky., to Chillicothe and Richmond, Mo., that year, settling for a time at Richmond. He returned again in 1855, selecting Breckenridge because it was named after his friend, John C. Breckenridge of Kentucky. He bought 760 acres of land for only $2140 at that time. In 1860 he and his family went to Caldwell county to live.

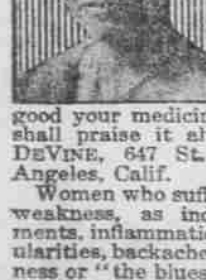
Many of the earlier residents of Caldwell county have reason to remember the doctor, for he was one of the few physicians available in that little-settled region. And he always could be relied upon to attend a case, whether pay was forthcoming or not. He never charged a widow, a working girl or a needy family for his services.

"I would better affor dto go without pay than they could without my help," he said.

TELL THE WORLD THIS WOMAN SAYS

That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made Me a Well Woman.

Los Angeles, Cal.—"I suffered with female troubles for years, was sick most of the time, was not able to do my own housework, and I could not get help from doctors. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the newspapers, and took six bottles, and am a well woman. You can use my name to tell the world the good your medicine has done me as I shall praise it always."—Mrs. A. L. DeVine, 647 St. Paul Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif.



Women who suffer from any form of weakness, as indicated by displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness or "the blues," should do as Mrs. DeVine did, and give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a thorough trial.

For over forty years this famous remedy, which contains the curative, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, has been correcting just such ailments. If you have mysterious complications write for advice to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

OIL SHORTAGE MENACING

SUPPLY OF PETROLEUM IN U. S. FAST GIVING OUT.

Seriousness of Situation Disclosed in Emergency Report Issued by the Bureau of Mines.

WASHINGTON.—This country faces an alarming snortage in petroleum and its products, including gasoline. The seriousness of the situation is disclosed in an emergency report of the bureau of mines. This has been transmitted to the house appropriations committee by Carter Glass, secretary of the treasury, with a recommendation that congress at once appropriate $50,000 to be used in an investigation looking toward the conservation of petroleum and natural gas.

Disclosures in this report, in conjunction with information in possession of the government that Great Britain and other foreign countries are laying the ground work for a monopoly of the Mexican petroleum, may lead congress to enact legislation to meet a situation which department officials say may become acute in the near future.

"The United States geological survey makes the pessimistic report that our underground reserves are 40 per cent exhausted and that we probably are near the peak of domestic production," says the bureau of mines report. "The consumption of petroleum is increasing far more rapidly than domestic production. During 1918 39,000,000 barrels of oil were imported from foreign countries and 27,000,000 barrels were withdrawn from stocks.

"Our future supply of petroleum must be conserved, and it is therefore imperative that the United States make every possible effort to further more efficient conservation of our underground reserves of oil and more efficient utilization of petroleum and its products, because:

"First—Petroleum has become the fundamental basis of the industrial and military life of the nation i nthat gasoline has become the motive power for some 6,000,000 automobiles and trucks, for airplanes, farm tractors, motor boats, etc. Fuel oil has become necessary for our navy, our merchant marine and larger industrial plants. Lubricating oil is essential for machinery of all kinds and without it not a wheel would turn.

"Second—The potential supplies of crude oil outside of the United States are passing almost entirely into the political and economic control of foreign governments and the United States is likel yto pass from the position of dominance into a position of dependence.

"Third, investigation of the bureau of mines, of the fuel administration and of other bodies have disclosed that the known oil reserves of the United States are not receiving adequate protection and are being wasted through inefficient methods in production, refining and utiliation of the oil."

The report says the fuel administration has made an investigation which shows that in 1917 in the exploitation of petroleum and natural gas in the United States the total wastes in oil and gas amounted to $2,000,008,000, and continues:

"The need for petroleum reaches every citizen in the United States. There are in service today some 6,000,000 automobiles and trucks using gasoline. The number of automobiles is increasing at the rate of 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 a year. Through pleasure cars, trucks, farm tractors, etc., every family in the United States is virtually interested in gasoline.

"Through lubricating oils every person in the United States has a direct interest. Lubricating oils are one of the three essentials of modern civilization and in equal importance to steel and coal, for without lubricating oils no machinery would be possible.

"The supply of fuel oil is, in the opinion of marine engineers, the strategic point for our merchant marine and in the development of any modern nacy.

"For the above reasons it is imperative that the United States take eevry step possible toward conserving our known reserves of oil. Petroleum and natural gas are not being replaced by nature and once gone cannot be replaced except from sources involving greater costs."

GOLD OUTPUT TO BE LARGE

Indications From Nome District Are for Profitable Season.

NENANA, Alaska.—Travelers arriving here from Nome say that indications point to a larger gold output from that district this season than last. On the benches of the Snake river, flowing close to Nome, a new strike was reported to have considerable merit. On Dry creek, flowing through the town of Nome itself, several dredging outfits expected to have a profitable season.

A strike of miners for $6 a day and board, with working day of eight hours, last year was said to have been settled, with no labor troubles in sight for this season's mining operations.

Filipinos Bound for Alaska.

HONOLULU, T. H.—In the past few weeks more than 1000 Filipinos, most of them sugar plantation laborers, have left Hawaii for various points on the mainland, attracted, it is said, by reports of high wages. According to the sugar planters, however, this exodus does not threaten a labor shortage, as the departures have been more than offset by arrivals here from the Philippines. Many of the Filipinos who left here are said to be bound for salmon canneries of Alaska.

The deepest well in the world is at Czuchow, in the coalfield of Upper Silesia. It has reached a depth of over 7348 feet below the surface.

FILIPINO HEARINGS FAIL TO MAKE CASE

No Immediate Need for Independence Apparent.

SELF-DEFENSE INADEQUATE

Impressions Gathered That Personal Ambition of Members of Commission Mainspring of Action.

WASHINGTON.—Nothing developed in the hearings given to the Philippine commission by the committee on insular affairs of the house and the Philippines committee of the Senate during the last week to disclos the need of any hurried consideration of Philippine independence.

It might well be said that the leaders of the commission, and particularly Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine senate and former delegate to congress, made out a rather bad case for the independence cause.

While contending in answer to a question from Senator Phelan that he had no fear of outside aggression if the islands were cut loose, Mr. Quezon admitted that the proposed now government woudl be in no position to resist an attack from Japan. He said that it would be some time before the islands could repel such an attack, setting the time necessary to build up an adequate defense at 10 years.

But it was apparent that the question of what may happen after independence is granted, if ever, is the least of the worries of the leaders of the independence movement. I fact, there seemed to be a desire to avoid such questions. It did not require any advance prejudices on the part of the spectator at the hearing to be able to gather the impression that the personal ambitions of Mr. Quezon and some of his fellows are the greatest factor in the promiotion of the independence movement.

No Special Advantage Shown.

Neither Mr. Quezon nor any of his fellow champions of independence could point to any special advantage that would be gained by the Filipinos themselves in freeing the islands. He admitted in answer to careful questioning by Representative Fairfield of Indiana that for several years the Philippines have enjoyed the highest measure of self-government. About all that was lacking was the privilege of the Filipinos to elect one of their number to the presidency of a Philippine republic.

Representative Fairfield inquired what advantages the Filipines would have in complete independence from the United States that they do not enjoy now. To this question Mr. Quezon said that the congress of the United States holds the power to annul any legislation adopted by the Philippine legislature, and the president of the United States may veto legislation after it has been passed by two-thirds majority over the veto of the governor-general.

But whe the Indiana representative inquired how many measures of the Philippine legislature had been annulled by congress ar vetoed by the president, Mr. Quezon showed manifest disappointment in having to answer, "not one."

Political Parties Differ Little.

The question as to political parties in the Philippines, raised also by Mr. Fairfield, created an amusing situation when Mr. Quezon was called upon to tell the differences between the two parties. One party, he explained, is the nationalist, which is his own party. The other party, the national democratic, he said, is an offshoot of his own party. The only difference between them, according to his statement, is that one party, the nationalist, is in office and has the jobs, while the other is on the outside clamoring to get in. He could tell of no fundamental differences.

When asked if it was the intention of the independence leaders to reply on the league of nations to protect them from Japan or other more formidable foes in event that independence was granted, Mr. Quezon said that membership in the league probably would be sought. While willing to have the islands cut loose from the United States without an agreed protectorate, Mr. Quezon and other Philippine leaders made it plain that they would look to the United States for protection in case of outside aggression on the principle of a paternal obligation. The United States having developed the Philippines and then sought to make them independent would never stand by and see this great altruistic achievement destroyed, was the Quezon position.

Japanese Question Uppermost.

The Japanese question was the one which would not down during the hearings, because it appeared to be uppermost in the minds of those members of the house and senate committees who have any knowledge of Pacific coast problems. All of Senator Phelan's questions were directed toward revealing the Japanese menace to Philippine independence so far as he could go without antagonizing the insular policy of his own party.

Representative John I. Nolan of San Francisco, unfettered by any platform promises of his party, was more searching in his questions and made it clear that he did not trust Japan.

Governor-General Harrison told the committee that he did not fear Japanese aggression for the reason that he hegarded the climate of the Philippines as too tropical for the Japanese, that they being an agricultural people they would hesitate to colonize territory where work in the open fields had such a serious handicap as the burning presence of a Philippine sun.

It was evident that the republican members of the two committees which conducted the hearings were not impressed by the need for any immediate action. Talks with some of the new members aside reveal a belief on their part that Philippine independence should not be considered for many years, if at all. The commission's last appeal was for immediate action, but this will not be granted.

HOME RULE FOR SCOTLAND

New Bill Introduced Provides Single Chamber Parliament.

LONDON.—Details of the bill introduced in the touse of commons by Sir Henry Cowan for giving home rule to Scotland are now published. The bill provides for the establishment in Scotland of a single chamber parliament, subordinate to the imperial parliament and consisting of 148 members. It provides for the representation of Scotland in the house of commons to continue as at present until separate provision is made for devolution in England and Wales.

All the powers that have been granted under the Irish home rule act would apply also to Scotland, except the control of the postoffice and the power to vary customs and excise. The regulation of the administration of old age pensions, national insurance and labor exchanges would be transferred to the Scottish parliament.

The executive power still is to be vested in the king, who will be represented in Scotland by a lord righ commissioner.

In case of dispute the judicial committee of the privy council is to be substituted for the house of lords as the final court of appeal.

Beginning May 1, 1919, a parcel post service will be operated between the United States and Paraguay, the weight limit being 11 pounds. The postage rate will be 12 cents a pound or fraction thereof, with an added charge of 30 cents a package.
