

WEST PORTLAND MAY GET WATER BY FALL

Property Owners' Company Is Behind Undertaking.

COST PLACED AT $18,000

Plan Calls for Six-Inch Main Laid From City System on Taylor's Ferry Road.

Two thousand acres of land in West Portland and West Portland park districts may be served with city water by fall, according to plans that are being formulated by property owners.

The land which it is proposed to supply with Bull Run water lies southwest of Multnomah station, about half an hour out on the Terrillier boulevard and about six miles from the heart of Portland.

To carry water to the new West Portland section it is proposed to lay a six-inch pipe connecting with the city main at Taylor's Ferry road near the city limits, running westward along the Taylor road for two and a quarter miles to the Pacific highway at the West Portland hill, where a reservoir would be established.

Pumping Station Planned. An automatic pumping station would be established to lift the water to the reservoir, the latter being built at a height of some 150 feet above the highest of the district to be served.

The estimated cost of the project is given as $18,000, and it is proposed to establish a stock company with stock of that amount or more, to be subscribed by the property owners.

On May 21 a meeting of resident property owners of that district was held at the West Portland schoolhouse and it was decided to form a water company, to be known as the West Portland Water Company.

Stockholders Meet July 1. A meeting of the property owners and stockholders of the new company has been set for the evening of July 1, when reports will be made.

City water officials and representatives of Portland construction companies and the city are already gone over the ground with the company officials and pronounce the project as entirely feasible for the sum indicated.

WOMEN'S NEWS

WESTMINSTER Presbyterian church was thronged with prominent society folk last night when Miss Margaret Porter and Van Rensselaer H. Sternberg were wed.

Green and white was the attractive color scheme chosen for the church, and palms and ferns, lilies and hydrangeas were artistically combined.

The wedding party was led by the little niece and nephew of the bride, Elizabeth and Andrew R. Porter. The little girl was dressed in a dainty, ruffled frock.

A reception and a dance followed the ceremony. The Porter home in Irvington was gaily decked with quantities of summer blossoms, emphasizing the pastel tones used in the gowns of the bride's attendants.

Mrs. Sternberg chose a suit of brown cloth as a going-away costume and a hat of brown with a matching veil.

Portland society folk are anticipating the wedding of Miss Helen Wheeler and Thomas Clark Van Orsdal.

HOMER IS MERE HOLE; HUSBAND BEAST, SAYS WOMAN.

Husband Attempted to Involve Her in Bootlegging, Charges Mrs. Russell; Divorce Requested.

For her home a hole dug in the hillside, "little better than the lair of a beast," for her husband a man who "bathed not more than once in six months and never washed his face or hands more than once a week," for her clothes "but one coat and one shabby dress" since marriage in 1916; for her home life the constant efforts of her husband to get bootlegging or help in petty thievery, is the picture painted by Mildred M. Russell in a divorce suit filed against Earl E. Russell in the circuit court yesterday.

Mrs. Russell was married at the age of 15 years in Great Falls, Mont., January 18, 1916, and has two children, Charles, 3, and Ada, 8 months. She declares her married life became so disagreeable that it was imperative that she leave her husband and come to Oregon to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Ellis, with whom she is now living. Her husband is in Ingomar, Mont.

Mrs. Matilda Lee broke a few records around the courthouse yesterday for quick divorces, incidentally "slipping one over" on Presiding Judge Gatens. Within a few hours her attorney, Jay Bowser, filed her complaint for divorce from Ralph Lee, a demurrer was filed by the defense, a waiver to further plea filed by the defendant and the divorce case was heard and decree awarded.

"I had no idea that the case had been filed the same day or I would not have granted the divorce," declared Judge Gatens afterward.

Other divorce suits filed yesterday were: Ora E. Gustafson against Charles A. Gustafson, cruelty; Lawrence L. Kirkendall against Lillian Kirkendall, cruelty; Catherine S. Craig against Samuel Craig, cruelty; Florence Mallory against Ernest Mallory, cruelty; Zenas Emery against Lorraine Emery, desertion, and Rose Wood Penhallegon against Thomas Arthur Penhallegon, desertion.

DAIRYMEN LIBERAL HOSTS AD MEN FEAST ON CREAM AND STILL MORE CREAM.

Luncheon at Hotel Benson Teems With All-Oregon Delicacies in Unstinted Measure.

The Oregon Dairy council, under the auspices of the program and menu for the Portland Ad club were arranged yesterday, won honors for the success of its special dairy day and the abundance of good things that were served at the Benson hotel.

There were butter, cream, cottage cheese, and ice cream of the best, and plenty of each, in addition to an all-Oregon offering of milk-fed veal, vegetables grown in this state, apple pie made of all Oregon products, and bread made from Oregon flour.

Marshall Dana paid tribute to the dairy industry, which represents an investment of $200,000,000 in Oregon and last year netted the state returns of $49,600,000, and in which there are 12,000 dairymen actively engaged in business.

A. M. Work told how the dairymen and distributors use every effort to keep milk pure and clean and asked the Ad club members to tell their wives that one of the reasons the price of milk can't go down now is because the consumer loses so many milk bottles.

W. J. Hofmann and Mayor Baker each received an ovation when they arrived and praise was given Mr. Hofmann's work in securing the 1920 Imperial session of the Shriners for Portland.

Three cheers were given for the Ad club committee that helped make the recent Pacific Coast Advertising club convention a success.
