

GENEROUS SALVATION ARMY WINS APPEAL

Elks' Fund Campaign Gains Momentum in City.

TOTAL EXCEEDS $28,000

Overseas Cap of Doughboy Disfigured by Weight of Coin; Upstate Progress Satisfactory.

There was "nobody home" in the clubrooms of Portland lodge of Elks yesterday. The door was locked and the key was lost. But the business thoroughfares of the city, fairly teeming with activities of members of the antlered order who are assisting in the Salvation Army drive, explained the lack of activity at the clubrooms. Every available member of the lodge was "doing his bit" to bring Portland's total to a point that will mean over-subscription of the quota.

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, with returns incomplete, a total of $23,861 was shown. Figures from the various precincts were not included in this total, and confidence was expressed that proceeds of the auction sale of late afternoon and "high jinks" of last night would prove most valuable in sending the indicator to a much higher figure.

Eric Y. Hauser Gives $1,000.

Among the individual contributions received yesterday was one for $1,000 from Eric Y. Hauser. The Greater of Oregon contributed $190 without solicitation, and numerous smaller subscriptions were made by individuals. E. W. Morris, formerly a member of the Portland police department, drove 40 miles from Tillamook to add his subscription to the fund.

A report from Hood River showed that $347.75 was obtained on the first day of the campaign in that city, and that the quota of $2,200 would be obtained by the end of the present week. Other towns of the state have reported progress and those in charge feel certain the state's quota will be raised with comparative ease.

Speakers Appeal to Crowds.

For two hours yesterday noon and last night crowds at Sixth and Alder streets were alternately entertained and exhorted to "come across" for the Salvation Army. Staff Captain Gabrielson's clear, tenor voice rang out again and again in the Salvation Army refrain, "Some one far from harbor you may guide across the bar, brighten the corner where ever you stand, following him various prominent Portland citizens addressed the crowds.

The speakers yesterday noon included George W. Caldwell, T. J. Cleaton, Chaplain Fred Anderson, Salvation Army overseas hero, David E. Lofgren, Private "Dad" Arnold and A. F. Fiegel.

Girls Collect Money.

At the night meeting Rev. E. Constant, Chaplain Anderson, George E. Rauch, Elton Watkins and Mr. Fiegel spoke.

Salvation Army lassies and girls in overseas uniforms passed through the crowd during the meeting and several hundred dollars were collected. The Elks also put on a stunt at the weekly meeting of the Ad club that netted almost $200. Julian Eitnane made a strong appeal for the Salvation Army, after which a number of the Eitnane beauties who are playing in Portland this week sold doughnuts for the Salvation Army.

Big Time Saturday Planned.

Major George O. Handenberg, in charge of Elks' stunts for the Salvation Army, is planning for a big night Saturday night. He has surprise after surprise to spring on the crowds which will be downtown and will keep the whole downtown section guessing from early in the evening until late at night. There will be all kinds of Elk fun and one long and glorious boost for the Salvation Army.

Final plans to comb Portland for subscriptions to the Salvation Army home service campaign were made at a meeting of colonels, captains and other workers in the lodge rooms of Elks temple last night.

Salvation Army Generous.

"We want to give every citizen an opportunity to join with the Elks in getting back of the Salvation Army home service campaign," said Julius J. Berg, exalted ruler of Portland lodge 142, E. P. O. Elks. "The Salvation Army has won the right to support and the Elks and their friends are not going to be stingy with the army. The army not for one moment was stingy with our boys overseas, and, in fact, never have been stingy with the man who needed it. In every part of Portland is not going to be stingy with the army."

Elks are getting much co-operation from women in the residence districts of the city, which is very much appreciated, said Mr. Berg yesterday. An illustration of this is found in South Portland, where headquarters were established in the Delin home. Misses Lillian Delin in charge. The Misses Cora and Lillian Delin have kept open house all day ever since the drive started for workers and persons wanting to subscribe to the fund.

Business Deserted for Drive.

Captain Irving Niles of the United States engineers, recently home from overseas, has dropped everything to take solitaires about the district in his car. J. R. Grek has left his business to spend all the time necessary to make a thorough canvass of his precinct. In every part of Portland the same spirit of dropping all until the drive is put over is being manifested, according to General Berg.

An overseas cap that not long ago went through the delousing process figured prominently in the Salvation Army drive at the auditorium Tuesday night, and added several hundred dollars to the fund. The cap is the property of one of the officers assigned to duty at general recruiting offices, Third and Oak streets, and was called for by one of the women of Mayor Baker's party.

Subscriptions Disfigure Cap.

"Captain, let me have your overseas cap," requested the fair canvasser, seeing the prospect of good financial returns from the large audience.

"Sure," assented the captain, and the collection began. Dimes, nickels, and even $5 and $10 bills showered into the "lid," with the result that the largest subscription of the day was turned into the fund. The captain complains that the cap was somewhat disfigured by the weight of coin, and does not fit as it did before the collection was taken. As he was among the doughboys who received Salvation Army doughnuts overseas, he is pleased to help in the present campaign, even to the slight disarrangement of his uniform.

Umatilla Responds to Call.

UMATILLA, June 25.—(Special).—The Salvation Army drive being made in this locality is meeting with success, according to word from Cyril Brownell, representative from this county, who is assisting in raising the funds.

BREEZY salesman whose wares were cradles and coffins is the role taken by William Russell in "Some Liar," reviewed by local motion picture officials last night and which will open today at the Liberty theater.

The breezy salesman proves his ability to handle his line of wares but his line of conversation, and in a talk with a pretty miss he makes a grave mistake. The girl is a resident of Yellow Jacket, Arizona, a community which was all that its name implied, so that when this young vendor boasts of his prowess as a killer of men he automatically wades into trouble. He told her he killed a dozen men every day just for excitement. Not knowing he was "some liar," she liked him for his cavellike tendencies and then without further ado the action in the screen is accelerated and the chuckles and chortles double in number and size.

"Some Liar," like the man it stars, is breezy and delightful. It is an adaptation from James Oliver Curwood's novel and was produced by Henry King.

Screen Gossip.

Exhibitor Matlock of three Pendleton motion picture houses reports that Bill Hart has ordered a $375 saddle from a Pendleton saddle maker famous for his skill and art. Douglas Fairbanks already possesses such a saddle and uses it in his pictures of the wild west.

Chicago Liquor Dealers Arouse Speculation Among "Drys."

CHICAGO, June 25.—Eighty saloonkeepers and 10 wholesale liquor dealers today paid the internal revenue tax for the fiscal year beginning July 1. Just as though prohibition had never been heard of.

Anti-saloon league officials hold that possession of a federal tax receipt is prima facie evidence, under the new Illinois search and seizure act, of law violation.

William Desmond, the star of numerous Triangle pictures, set sail from his native city of Dublin, Ireland, when he was scarcely 1 year old. His destination was New York city. When he graduated from a New York high school he at once sought out the offices of theatrical managers and, to quote his own experience, "just drifted upon the stage," without apparent obstruction from any quarter.

His first stage appearance was in "Quo Vadis."

Leaving behind him Mr. Ziegfeld's and Father Knickerbocker's equally famous Follies, Will Rogers has departed for California, where he will create the character of Billy Fortune in a series of pictures. Billy originally appeared in the columns of the Saturday Evening Post. W. R. Lighth was responsible for his introduction to fame.

Under the working title of "The Eternal Mother," the fourth of the Florence Reed series of feature photoplays has been commenced. Lionel Atwill, recently leading man for Frances Starr in David Belasco's production of "Tiger," and formerly prominent in support of Nazimova in her Ibsen season at the Plymouth theater, has been engaged for the leading male support.

"The Sea Wolf," Jack London's masterpiece, the novel which brought him into fame as a fictionist and proved him possessed of a unique ability for character depiction and the telling of a thrilling story, will be given a sumptuous special production at the hands of Famous Players-Lasky corporation in Hollywood. It is announced, George Melford will direct.

Wallace Reid's new picture, "You're Fired," which is scheduled for release this month, promises to be one of the best pictures in which the popular star has ever appeared.

"You're Fired" is an adaptation of O. Henry's story entitled "The Halberdier of the Little Rheinschloss."

ARGUMENTS IN DIETZ CASE SENT TO JURY

Government Calls Women to Refute Testimony of Defense.

DRAFT EVASION CHARGED

Court Holds Whether Mother Is Mrs. Lewis or Sioux Indian Woman Immaterial.

SPOKANE, June 25.—Closing arguments in the case of William H. ("Lone Star") Dietz, former Washington State college and Mare Island marines football coach, were submitted to a jury in United States district court here this afternoon. Dietz is charged on two counts with false registration for the draft and with falsifying his draft questionnaire.

The government called in rebuttal two women, former residents of Rice Lake, Wis., Dietz' former home, to refute testimony given yesterday by Mrs. Lenna Howard Lewis on behalf of the defense that several days elapsed between the birth of her son and the substitution by William Wallace Dietz, the defendant's father, of an Indian baby, whom the defense claims is the defendant.

The case was given to the jury at 1 P. M. after Judge Rudkin had delivered his instructions.

Intentionally Held Factor.

The court declared it immaterial whether the defendant's mother is Mrs. Lenna Howard Lewis, as the government maintains, or a Sioux Indian woman, as claimed by the defense, as in either case Dietz is an American citizen. The determining factor, the court held, was whether the defendant knowingly falsified when he stated in his questionnaire that he was a non-citizen Indian, that he was born on the Pine Ridge Indian reservation and that he had received a government allotment.

"Is not 'Lone Star' Dietz the type of the man who fought to keep out of the American army? Is he not the type of the slacker?" When he got on a non-citizen stand and called his dead father licentious and asked his mother to deny his birth, thereby making of himself an illegitimate, did he not show that he was the type, the kind of person slackers are made of?

"Gentlemen of the jury, I don't ask you to believe the defendant. That's why I don't ask you to believe the testimony of Mrs. Lewis, who calls herself the foster-mother of the defendant, Dietz. Do you believe that any woman who has lived with her husband for five years as Mrs. Lewis had with William Wallace Dietz and who gives birth to a still-born child will take to her breast and nurse and nourish the product of the adultery of her husband? I don't ask you to believe that."

Verdicts suggested.

"But that is not the issue, as a matter of fact. Sensational features, almost fictional, have crept into this case, and because of the defendant's prominence, so that the issue has become almost clouded.

"The issue is whether or not on September 12, 1918, when Dietz registered as a non-citizen Indian, he lied. Whether, when he filled out his questionnaire and said he was not a citizen, that he was born on the Pine Ridge Indian reservation, and that he had received a government allotment, he knew he lied."

"Dietz has shown himself to be versatile as to his birth or parentage to fit the case. When the estate of his father was probated he was an American-born child, the son of William Dietz and Lenna Dietz (Lewis), because he had a chance thereby to get some money. He became an Indian when he realized that he could make more money at the Indian business than he could in any other line."

"Gentlemen, Dietz has been a consummate success as an impostor and in his capacity as posing as the famous Lone Star. He has made money by it, and there lies the crux.

"The question is whether he falsified his questionnaire and whether he made false claims."
