Fourteen Points of the Bond Business

"Seeing It Through"

No. 11.

The bond business is a form of merchandising. The trust company purchases the bonds in large quantities and retails them to the custodians of trust funds, to estates, banks, institutions and individuals. There are profits but the margins are narrow and a company's capital must be kept constantly at work by turning many transactions at a time and one right after another.

Investors should avail themselves of the advantages a conservative trust company offers through the expert advice and judgment of officers who have had broad experience in appraising investments. Through a comprehensive system of safeguards a large organization like the Lumbermens Trust Company affords protection for the investments of its customers from the day their money is invested until the final payments of interest and principal have been paid.

Our interest in an investment does not end when the bonds have been sold by us to our customers. We keep in touch with the affairs of the obligors until the final bonds have been paid up at maturity.

Bonds which we offer have been purchased with our own funds after a careful examination has been made of the security and all other aspects of the investment. The bonds are sold to clients with our recommendation at prices to yield a return as high as is consistent with safety of principal.
