than last year. The estimated yield is 35 bushels per acre. Wheat is in excellent condition and will make a bumper crop without more rain. Barley acreage is reduced 75 per cent. Oats will be a small crop, but are in good condition. The small acreage of spring wheat is yet in good condition. The recent rain helped spring grain in the foothills. Most of the barley is in good condition and some excellent. The first barley will be harvested Monday, July 7.

FALOUSE CROP IS PAST DANGER

State's Gain May Be 50 Per Cent If Rain Falls in Big Bend.

SPokane, Wash., July 3.—(Special.)—With approximately the same acreage sown to wheat this year as last, the crop in eastern Washington this year is one-third greater than last year. If rain falls in the Big Bend country in the next few days, the total wheat crop for Washington will be at least 50 per cent larger than last year. To put the yield into figures, approximately 40,000,000 bushels of wheat will be harvested in Washington, if the usual moisture is forthcoming. Without rains in the next fortnight, the yield should total about 26,000,000 bushels. These figures include fall and spring wheat combined. Winter wheat is made, and estimates from reliable grain dealers and from bankers who are in close touch with the fields are that winter wheat will show an increase of from 30 to 40 per cent over last year. Spring wheat will be at least 20 per cent less than the yield last year, but that in part is owing to a smaller acreage sown to spring wheat this year. The crop is not so good as last year, but is better than most other years. In the Palouse country all wheat seems to be well out of danger, but acreage of spring wheat there is not large, comparatively speaking. Taking the state as a whole, no one can speak with certainty on the price of spring wheat. The crop is not made. It will be good, if expected rains come soon; otherwise, many sections will be short.

In those counties of Idaho which border on the Palouse section of Washington both winter and spring wheat are doing well. The yield of winter wheat in those in Washington. In the Lewiston region complaints have come that the crops have been scorched, and estimates are that the yield of winter wheat in the total wheat yield will be suffered. The oats crop in northeastern Washington promises to be a good one. Over last year's yield, little barley is grown. In southern Washington oats and barley are showing an increase per acre, but reports are that the acreage has decreased. One grain dealer, member of a big firm, declares that the oats and barley yields will not be large enough to take care of local consumption.

BAKER CROP BELOW NORMAL

Yield Falls Short, Despite Large Gain in Acreage.

BAKER, Or., July 3.—(Special.)—Former farmer and merchant of this vicinity are almost unanimous in the opinion that the oat, wheat and barley crops of this county will fall far short of the normal output. In the opinion of J. P. O'Bryen, proprietor of the O'Bryen Grain company of this city, acreage has been increased during the past year, but the yield of winter wheat will be from 40 to 50 per cent less than in former years. The crop of fall and spring wheat will be about one-half that of previous years. After nearly three months without rain the dry land crops have a very poor chance of making a good yield of irrigated lands will be 75 per cent normal. County Agriculturalist Tweed and Robert McLaughlin of the Baker Mill & Grain company are of the same opinion as is Mr. O'Bryen and state that the figures given are a little better than will probably be the yield.

RENDER YOURSELF IMMUNE

FROM OAK OR IVY POISONING

MIDSUMMER is the time when poison oak and poison ivy are most to be dreaded by those who are susceptible to their malignity. The irritation and perspiration induced by outdoor exercise render the skin exceedingly susceptible to infection, even though one may not come in direct contact with these beautiful, but to be dreaded, shrubs. There are cases on record where results from oak or ivy poisoning have been most serious. If you have been exposed, or if you purpose a trip where poison oak or ivy abound, use Santiseptic. It is a powerful disinfectant, and it will render the skin immune to the infection. It is a powerful disinfectant, and it will render the skin immune to the infection. AMERICANS HASTEN HOME FORCES ON RHINE ARE BEING GREATLY REDUCED. Scarcely Single Regiment to Be Left Abroad by Fall if Present Plans Carry. BY LINCOLN EYRE. (Copyright by the New York World. Published by arrangement.) PARIS, July 3.—(Special Cable.)—Major-General Henry T. Allen, formerly commander of the 8th corps, will have command of the American forces on the Rhine after General Liggett's return home. General Pershing announced today. Of five regular divisions—the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th and 5th—now in the army of occupation, the last two already are bound for ports of embarkation. Of the three that remain, the 2d division will start for America within a few weeks and the 3d will go a week or so later. Their departure, however, is contingent upon Germany's ratification of the treaty and her honest execution of its terms. The 1st division will remain for a longer period, but by autumn—always provided that Germans do not backslide—it is not likely that there will be more than a single American regiment with certain small auxiliary units on German soil. The third army, under which the occupying divisions have been grouped, will remain in process of being dissolved. General Allen's headquarters probably will be at Eszterdun in the fortress overlooking Coblenz. Questioned as to when he contemplated taking the homebound path, General Pershing said he doubted whether he could get away until late in August or possibly in September, as he did not mean to leave any loose ends behind him. The general laid stress on the splendid moral of the men of the Rhine, and expressed the belief that every one of them, with very few exceptions would volunteer to remain in the Rhine area as long as needed. His inspection of individual divisions, he added, had convinced him that no army had ever developed so high a moral as that of the American expeditionary force as a whole. Censorship of soldiers' letters, General Pershing declared, had ceased as long as needed, the treaty as well as the nominal press censorship which had been maintained throughout the armistice. General headquarters will be transferred from Chaumont to Paris on July 15.

SUIT HITS FINN SOCIETY Transfer of Church Printing Concern Alleged Invalid. ASTORIA, Or., July 3.—(Special.)—To recover $571 with interest and attorney's fees, a suit was filed today by Jesse E. Hurd against J. F. Planting, E. N. Hurd and the Finnish Congregational Printing society. The complaint avers that on July 11, 1917, the plaintiff sold the plant of the old Lower Columbia Publishing company to Planting for the sum of $248 and only $22 of that amount being paid. Continuing, the complaint says that in October, 1917, Planting sold the property to E. N. Hurd and in June of last year Hurd sold it to the Finnish Congregational Printing company. Both these sales, the complaint contends, were void as they were in direct violation of the bulk sales act in that the creditors of Planting were not notified as required by the act.

CRATER ROAD IS APPROVED Douglas County to Help Build $63,000 Highway. ROSEBURG, Or., July 3.—(Special.)—Late this afternoon the county court signed the agreement providing for cooperation in the construction of the Tiller-Crater Lake cutoff highway. The proposed highway will cost approximately $2,000,000, the county, state and federal government jointly standing the expense. A part of the grade has already been built by the forestry service and is said to be a fine piece of road. The cutoff will give a direct route from Roseburg to Crater Lake National Park, and will reduce the distance by 75 miles, besides opening up a route of rare scenic beauty.
