GOVERNOR TO GET REPORT

Child Welfare Commission Conducts Inquiry: Bars Public Because Fearing Influence.

Some time early next week, with scores of witnesses interrogated and their testimony duly digested, the child welfare commission will conclude its inquiry into affairs at the Waverly baby home and will forward its findings to Governor Ben W. Cleott at

Not a hint has gone forth concerning the progress of the investigation, for all sessions of the commission have been closed to the public, and the na-ture of the report will not be divulged until Governor Olcott breaks the seal. until Governor Olcott breaks the seal. The Waverly inquiry, instituted when charges of gross mismanagement, had diet and unsanitary conditions were leveled at the home, has gripped the interest of the Portland public as have few other civic matters within recent

Mrs. Millie R. Trumbull of the com mission said resterday that the secret progress of the inquiry had been dic-tated by a desire for thoroughness and expedition rather than by any intent to suppress the facts or limit the scope of the probe.

Blas Feared From Crowd.

Public sessions, explained Mrs. Trum-buil, would have drawn record crowds and tended to create an atmosphere of rancor and invective. And witnesses, in two or three instances, had freely im-parted testimony that would have been withheld had the sessions not been ex-centive, said Mrs. Trumbull withheld had the sessions not been executive, said Mrs. Trumbull.

Leading the fight against the secret inquiry, which she declares will fall to elicit all of the facts which may be arrayed against the management of Waverly home, is Mrs. Ella H. Klippel, who aponsored the first alleged expose and whose charges of malnutrition and and whose charges of mainutrition and neglect brought about the demand for inquiry into conditions, both past and present, at the institution.

"I know, from information in my possession and from witnesses who will be produced by me, as well as by others," said Mrs. Klippel, "that any report that may go to Governor Olcott, without such a full exposition of all the facts and elreumstances relating to the facts and circumstances relating to the past management of the Waverly baby home, will not disclose the full truth or the full facts with reference to the past management of that institution."

Secret Session Irks. Summoned before one of the nission's hearings Saturday night, Mrs Klippel instantly declined to testify at a closed session, reiterating her opinion that the inquiry is of right the concern of the public, and her be-lief that gecrecy will tend to drag out the whitewash from the cubbyhole of civic affairs.

In a letter to the child welfare commission, dispatched to that body under date of yesterday, Mrs. Kilppel repeats her position and offers to present not only her own testimony, but that of other material witnesses, if the commission will but name a day for a commission will but name a day for a public hearing.

"I will gladly bring forward my evi-dence." offers Mrs. Klippel, "both oral and documentary, and produce such witnesses as are within my knowledge, to the end that full justice may be done, and that the institution may be, if possible, placed upon a high plane of management such as its character demands.

Public Hearing Asked.

"I hereby make formal request and demand upon your honorable body to appoint, in the very near future, such a public hearing as will give all parties in interest an opportunity to be heard."

Waverly baby home, the target of suppressed individual criticism, as well as of a specific official report on the part of the women's protective division of the police bureau, became a storm center of open criticism some weeks ago when an epidemic of malignant dysentery caused the death of 14 in-fants in less than a fortnight.

fants in less than a fortnight.
Though existing conditions at the home were not held to be directly responsible for the epidemic, the gates of aitank were opened. Following the public airing the board of directors of Waverly home asked that an official inquiry be instituted, and Governor Oicott directed that it be made by the child welfare commission. child welfare commission.
