SAN FRANCISCO, July 22 .- (Special.) -There was just one hig hurdle be-tween the Seals and victory today. Lieutenant John C. Oldham, the fearless fisherman, was that obstacle. Lieutenant John C. has been a stumbling block to the Seals before this season, but never was he more effective than today when he beat them 5-0. As a result of the Beaver victory

McCredie's team moved into sixth place in the position column, after having rested for a time on the doorway lead-ing to the cellar. Sait Lake, by trim-ming the Oaks 5 to 3, stepped into third Oldham and Baker formed the Seals' Oldham and Baker formed the Seals' battery the opening game of the 1917 season, and Oldham and Baker, working this time against the Seals, looked mighty nifty out there today. Whenever the situation was at all ticklish Lieutenant John C. put just a little more stuff on the ball and he had Fitzgerald and Hunter failing down to keep from being hit by curve balls that sailed right over the heart of the plate. Baker's Wing on Job.

Whenever a Seal got ambitious on the bases Del Baker cut loose with one of his line shots and turned him back. Taking it fore and aft, it was quite a big day for the old Seal battery and George Maisel, another former Seal, was up for Portland.

up for Portland.
Yep, you're right! Walt McCredie stayed right out before the public gaze until the last man had been retired.
Johnny Couch could not fool the Beavers, for they got nine hits off him the seven innings he tolled and a ild throw by him helped them mightwild throw by him helped them might-liy in the two runs they scored in the third inning. Johnny was lifted to let Carl Zamloch strike out for him in the last of the seventh, and Captain Jim Scott was not a bit better than Couch. He worked two innings, during which he was found for four hits and one run, and it took a double play to shut off a flock of Beaver runs in the ninth.

Couch's Throw Helps. Couch threw over Koerner's head after fielding a bunt in the third inning, and that miscue put Beavers on second and third. They scored on an out and an infield hit that Caveney knocked down. Rader got a double behind Oldham's single in the fifth and after Oldham but head toward hear toward out at the plate by ham had been tossed out at the plate by Caveney, Rader scored on a double

DEL MONTE, Cal., July 22.-Elliot Calender is the latest player who has attracted the attention of golf followers in California as a result of his play Calender played into the finals and was only defeated by Jack Neville, twice champion of California. It was not until the home green was reached that the issue was decided. He is con-sidered one of the longest hitters on the coast. Those who watched the contest between the two men say that weakness at putting during the first few holes of the match lost Calender the tournament.
