

INDICTMENT AGAINST GILKYSON DISMISSED

Father of Young Man to Pay Nurse, Alleged Defrauded.

MARRIAGE LIFE TANGLED

Woman Who Posed as Wife of Former Naval Officers Says, "I'm Off Him for Life."

Indictments against Richard E. Gilkyson and Lois M. Imhah, known recently as Lois M. Gilkyson, for defrauding Miss Genevieve Taylor, nurse, were dismissed yesterday at the request of the complaining witness, when G. W. Gilkyson, financial manager of the Pacific States Telephone & Telegraph company in San Francisco and father of the young man, arranged for the payment of $144.10 to Miss Taylor in satisfaction of her claim.

Courtesy law marriage ties, which held the young and good-looking woman who posed as Mrs. Gilkyson, were severed beyond repair by the developments of the past week, during which time she spent several days in the county jail while her supposed husband was in custody in San Francisco.

"I'm off him for life," was the terse announcement she made to Deputy District Attorney Pierce when he told her she was free and asked if she was going back to Gilkyson.

Marriage Relations Tangled.

Matrimonial relations were very much tangled in the Gilkyson case for it appears that both parties had been married before they met and both had children. The young woman, whose parents are supposed to be wealthy ranchers of Tillamook county, has a child of four years and declares her husband is dead. She said that Gilkyson had an interlocutory decree of divorce from a wife in San Francisco and that they had been awaiting the expiration of the time limit.

W. J. Phillips, of the Portland Bell telephone system, who was asked by Gilkyson Sr. to look after affairs here for him, declared to Deputy Pierce that she had never heard of any trouble between young Gilkyson and his wife, to say nothing of a divorce. They had one child.

Statement is Reversed.

When first questioned by Deputy Sheriff Christofferson after her arrest, the young woman in the case said that she had been married to Gilkyson in Vancouver, Wash., in April. When the deputy reached for a telephone to corroborate the statement, she interrupted to say that she meant they had tried to get married but could not because of her would-be husband's interlocutory decree. She said she had been a moving-picture actress in the Mack Sennett studio in Los Angeles and that Gilkyson had been an officer in naval aviation. She went under the name of "Lois Dale" in the movies, she said.

Genevieve E. Taylor, the nurse who caused the arrest of the Gilkysons, had attended the supposed wife during two weeks of illness and had cashed a check of Gilkyson for $75 which was found to be worthless. Gilkyson took $50 with which to go to San Francisco and left $15 with his "wife." Meanwhile he had borrowed $25 from Miss Taylor, left her to pay $149 hospital bill, and owed her $30 for two weeks of nursing, making a total of $144.10.

The young woman who posed as Gilkyson's wife now declares that Gilkyson deceived her, that he borrowed much money from her without repaying it, and that she will prosecute him if restitution is not made.

MEMORIAL FOR STOCKMEN

W. S. LADD'S AND "MIKE" WISDOM'S WORK REMEMBERED.

Live-stock Pioneers to Be Honored by Engraved Plates in Stock Show Home's Walls.

Two memorial plates, one commemorating the pioneer work and achievements of William S. Ladd, who was among the first importers of pure-bred livestock in the state, and the other in memory and recognition of M. D. ("Mike") Wisdom, for many years identified with the livestock industry of Oregon, will be imbedded in the stonework at the entrance of the new stockshow building now being built at North Portland by the Pacific-International livestock exposition.

"Oregon is just now beginning to reap the great benefits of the splendid pioneer work done by these two men," said Chairman Frank Robertson of the building committee yesterday, "and the livestock enthusiasts of the present day are eager to give every recognition possible to the foundation work which they depend on for the completion of the Pacific-International stock show home, a new and widespread impetus will be given to the development of the great livestock industry in the north-west. The foundation for the great industry now so splendidly expanding was laid by our pioneer livestock men, among whom William S. Ladd and M. D. Wisdom were most prominent."

Mr. Robertson said that the huge building, covering 7 1/2 acres, is now more than 50 per cent complete, and that construction in all the numerous units of the big stock show home is now far in advance of the schedule. It will be completed by November 1, giving a leeway of more than two weeks for detail equipment before the Pacific-International's annual show opening on November 17.

Many of Portland's livestock enthusiasts will go to Salem today to attend a luncheon of breeders, stockmen, bankers, business men and civic club leaders at the Hotel Marion, at 1:30. Vice-President E. G. Crawford of the United States National bank will be one of the speakers and Frank Brown of Carlton, president of the Pacific-International, will also address the meeting.
