Warm Welcome Accorded 233

One Sergeant Has Three Crosses.
Occupation Work in Germany
Done Since Armistice.

Something of the spirit that characterized the first big homecomings after the war was exhibited yesterday morning at the union station, when more than 1000 Portlanders gathered to welcome 233 members of the 4th engineers, one of Oregon's last big detachments from overseas. The boys, who were in charge of Lieutenant H. J. King, are principally from Oregon and Washington, and 73 of them live in this city. Veterans of three drives are the engineers, who saw action on the Marne, on the Vesle, at Mihiel and in the Argonne. Many of those in Portland yesterday wore distinguished service medals, and the unit boasts possession of twice as many decorations as any infantry regiment in the division. The 4th engineers lost nearly 60 boys killed in battle, besides having 300 wounded.

German Pup Is Mascot.

The special train which brought the men to Portland bore a huge sign, "Portland bound! From the Rhine to the Columbia." A crowd of parents and relatives from all parts of the state gathered in front of the youths, who brought with them even their mascot, a German pup, with the auspicious name of "Huts." Among those who wore decorations for bravery was Sergeant E. W. Waltman of Kellogg, Idaho, who has the distinguished service cross, Belgian military cross and croix de guerre.

The boys after the war were sent into Germany to the Rhine and Moselle valleys. They reached New York late last month. At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon they resumed their journey to Camp Lewis. In the morning they were taken to the Multnomah club for a swim and later lunched at the Benson, where Mayor Baker spoke. Musical numbers were furnished by Jane Burns Albert and the War Camp Community Service quartet.

The following Oregon men returned with the engineers:

in Parkway.

"Be as brave in your sorrow as your sons were in battle, and let these crosses be a comfort to you," said French Consul C. Henri Labbe yesterday afternoon, in addressing two Portland mothers to whom were given the croix de guerre awarded their sons who died in battle.

Upon a platform decorated with the flags of France and the United States, in the south parkway, the two women and two soldiers were presented with medals by General Martin, and their citations were read before a gathering of soldiers and civilians. Visiting members of the National Chamber of Commerce, with Mayor Baker, witnessed the ceremony, as also did a company of men in charge of Colonel Koester from Vancouver barracks.

The croix de guerre was presented to Mrs. H. Schaffer of 551 Twenty-fifth street North for her son, Corporal Walter Schaffer of company M, 23d infantry, who, with a sergeant, at Chateau Thierry advanced his men under shell fire, cleared a wood and took 20 prisoners without loss.

Mrs. F. E. Walling of Waldport received the citation of her son, Corporal Carl Walling of the 147th field artillery, who remained at an observation post under intense enemy bombardment and aided in directing the fire of the allied batteries until fatally wounded.

To Sergeant James E. Poole of company L, 361st infantry, was given a croix de guerre for remaining at his post and leading his men through a city under heavy bombardment.

The fourth French decoration was a medal militaire for Private Andrew Amacher, company C, 348th machine gun battalion, whose regimental citation praises his exceptional efficiency and fidelity in remaining at his post as a gunner and firing from an exposed position in direct range of the enemy.

WOMAN SAVED MUCH SUFFERING

By taking Friend's Advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

West Plains, Mo.—"I was all run down in health, had indigestion and terrible cramps every month so I was unable to do anything. I had tried every doctor in West Plains, also every remedy I could think of, without relief. One day when I was suffering greatly a friend gave me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So I did, and through it I found relief from my suffering and I really believe it saved my life. It does not seem as though I can say enough in praise of this wonderful medicine for the health it has brought me."—Miss CORA LEE HALL, West Plains, Mo.

Perhaps it may seem an extravagant statement to say that this great remedy saved a life; but women like Mrs. Hall, to whom it has brought health, appreciate the danger and suffering they have escaped too well to doubt it! All who suffer should try it. Why risk life and health without it?

For special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Rabbit-Sized Camel With Water Compartments Once Native.

THE DALLES, Or., Aug. 7.—(Special.)—Bones of a prehistoric camel and those of a three-toed horse were uncovered in the caves between The Dalles and Chenoweth yesterday by a field expedition of 20 men from the University of Chicago under the direction of J. Harlan Bretz. The geologists are touring the west studying the rock formations of the Cascade range.

The bones of the prehistoric horse indicate that this section of the country was the home of ancient doblers perhaps 2,000,000 years ago. The three-toed horse of The Dalles probably belongs to the miocene age, according to the scientists.

The prehistoric horse was smaller and in almost every particular different from the modern horse. Its teeth were not grinders, but more fang-like, and its hoofs were three-toed.

The find of the camel bone is perhaps more significant from a scientific point of view than the uncovering of the horse bones, since there are no living wild types of camel, save one, a two-humped variety discovered in central Asia. So bones of the prehistoric camel are the only means by which science is able to trace the evolution of the camel from its earliest forms.

This prehistoric camel was not much larger than a large jack rabbit and had no hump. However, its feet bones are not unlike those of the present day camel, and it was provided with the peculiar stomach divided into separate water compartments.

Speed—and the price of Meat

Forty-eight hours after cattle are purchased by Swift & Company they are hanging up as meat; within two weeks the fresh meat has been sold.

This speed means money in the pocket of the one who raises the live stock and of the one who eats the meat. It means a rapid "turnover" of capital and investment—making possible the transaction of daily business on a narrower margin of profit.

Speed permits Swift & Company to do a successful business on a profit of a fraction of a cent per pound.

Such speed, with its rapid turnover and smaller profits would be impossible without the efficient organization and wide scope of Swift & Company, the results of fifty years' experience in handling meat.

Do you believe that government interference with the complicated and efficient machinery of the packing industry can be of any benefit? Experience with government regulation of railroads and telephone and telegraph might suggest an answer
