BY HARRY M. GRAYSON.

"Cy" Falkenberg's old souborn was altogether too much for the Beavers yesterday afternoon, and Portland dropped the third game of the series via Whitehawk avenue. Formerly stable mate of Napoleon Lajoie and ex-Federal league string bean with the side-arm delivery let "our boys" down with three meaty hits. Score, Oakland 6, Portland 0.

George Maisel got two of "Cy's" ration of base knocks, while Arthur Koehler blasted the stretched reach for two-base hits with two away in the closing round, the tall tenor of Howard's hirelings eased up. The veteran brought to the coast by Bill Clymer, and then swapped for Lynn Brenton, held the backstops as helpless as a jugful of blind men.

"Lefty" Schroeder made his first appearance as a Beaver at Twenty-fourth and Vaughn streets in his eighth and eighth innings of occupancy, although nicked for eight hits, pitched good enough baseball to have won an ordinary ball game. As most youngsters do, the Albino kid looked bad once or twice when the enemy got to bunting the horsehide. But two of the three runs registered off the big portside were earned.

Signs Fans in Pinch

Schroeder retired in Portland's half of the eighth to allow Captain Patrick Signin to strike out for him. Joe Dailly then made his 1915 debut, and despite the fact that he was welcomed by singles on the part of Murphy and Samuel Cohen Bohm, might have escaped with but one run scored against him had not Farmer misjudged Elliott's long fly as a result of which Elliott gets credit for a two-bagger, and a brace of those things that win ball games are the accusers. Howley went third on Falkenberg's sacrifice hit and was wild-pitched over the top.

Grover's double and singles by Cooper and Guisto accounted for the Oaks' first run in the opening canto. Jaycel Ewins' hired help turned the trick again in the second, Lane's swat to center allowed Murphy across the Rhine. Murph beat out a tap to Kingston, was sacrificed to second and proceeded on his merry way, taking third on Elliott's infield foul.

Beavers Play Easy Ball

Some 1200 fans and fanettes witnessed the slugging contest between the Beavers and the Oaks at the stadium here yesterday. The Beavers had a bunch of stags at bay, and it is as obvious as stars on a clear night that unless some punch is added to their play, they will lose the club serious opposition during the balance of the season. When Signin and Luxnerne Blue get back in the game it may be a different tale.

Kingdom made his first error of the week yesterday, although he has the earmarks of a great pastime who needs seasoning behind the field and bat. Koehler fills in nicely at first base, but Blue is missed for both his field generalship and his .271 batting average, which is good, in view of the consideration of the fact that he is a Beaver.

Levey Lou Guisto again cut fancy capers around first base for Dashing Del. He drove in the first Oak run laid down a sacrifice hit and drew a walk as his share of the California sanga's offensive.

Double-headers are scheduled for today and tomorrow. First game commences at 1:30 P. M.
