GERMAN ATTACK DESCRIBED

Polish Priest Relates Story of Hardship and Oppression in Region of Warfare.

The article below was written by Mra.

Marguerite E. Harrison, who, as staff correspondent of the Sun, went to Europe eight menths ago. Mra. Harrison was the first menths ago. Mra. Harrison was the first american woman who succeeded in getting into Germany since the declaration of war in 1917 and one of the few Americans who reached Berlin since the armistice. She spent the greater part of her time abroad in Heriin, and her thorough knowledge of the German language gave her opportunities of getting at the facts which few others had. This article, which is one of a series to appear in the Sun from time to time, deals with New Poland and gives some of the truths about the conditions there, for Mrs. Harrison was not satisfied with reports—she investigated for herself.

ARTICLE III. BY MARGUERITE E. HARRISON. Staff Correspondent of the Sun. (Copyright, 1919, by the A. S. Abell Com-pany.) Since last March, when an agreement was reached between the Posgn and

Warsaw governments and the German republic, there has been, theoretically, an armistice along the demarcation line fixed by a joint commission. In West Prussia it follows the boundary for a short distance, then curves into Ger-many, running as far west as Schneidemany, running as far west as Schneide-muhl, where it takes a southeasterly direction until it strikes the old Rus-sian frontier which forms the dead line in Silesia. Troops were massed on each side of the line all last spring, and while there were undoubtedly viola-tions of the armistice by both Poles and Germans, according to the German papers the Poles were invariably the aggressors. It was a favorite form of anti-Polish propaganda. I was told that machine-gun attacks without anti-Polish propaganda. I was told that machine-gun attacks without provocation were a daily occurrence on the Polish front between Thorn and Hohensalza, so I decided that I would investigate for myself, and one morning I took the train for Argenau, a village which was a German outpost on

When I arrived it was early and very few inhabitants were up. I stepped in at a bakery, from which there emanated a delicious smell of hot rolls, and asked for some bread and a cup of coffee. The baker's wife was at light for the baker's wife w of coffee. The baker's wife was at first not at all inclined to be communicative. "Are you German or Polish?" I asked. "German, of course."

I had the necessary safe conducts from the German commandantur in Danzig, so I did not anticipate any serious difficulty in getting through the German lines and set off with two small boys carrying my luggage in a push carr down the chaussee, the high road, that led to the Polish line. I passed two German posts and was wishin a thousand feet of the Poles. I could even see their blue caps bobing up at intervals behind the wall of a push intervals behind the wall o farm yard that had been converted into a temporary fort. I did the same and promptly hoisted the white flag in the shape of my handkerchief, which I waved frantically. After a few minutes I ventured to raise my head, but was restrained by a gesture from the youngest of the kids. "Machine geweere," he said in a frightened whisper. With that the Germans let loose and four rounds of machine-gun fire were pumped right into the Polish lines."

It fairly shone with cleanilness, the picket fence that surrounded the yard had been newly painted a bright apple green, there were pansies and wall flowers in full bloom in the prim flower beds that lined the path leading to the front door, and the gate stood invitingly half way open. It was evidently the priest's house. I walked in and knocked at the door. No one answered, so I went around the back and peeped into the open kitchen door. The floor was of bright red tiles, the wails a was of bright red tiles, the walls a snowy white and adorned with rows of shining copper pots and blue and white crockery plates. At the windows were white muslin curtains edged with crockery plates at table by the door sat a quaint little elderly woman peeling potatoes. She wore a white muslin cap pand a big checked apron covered her black woolen dress. She gave a little scream and dropped her knife when she saw me, for strangers are rare in Armarion Grand Jury Convenes.

To Fight Film

DENTAL SCIENCE has proved that the great tooth wrecker is a slimy film.
You can feel it with your tongue. Most tooth troubles are caused by it. It clings to teeth, enters the crevices, hardens and stays. And teeth will discolor and decay here that film stays, however much you brush them. That is why millions of tooth brush users fail to save their teeth.

That film is what discolors - not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Scientists have for years sought ways to combat that film, but the methods proved inadequate. Then one man, after extensive research, applied activated pepsin—a digestant—to the film. And many clinical tests seem to clearly prove that he solved this great film problem.

We ask you to see for yourself. This pepsin method is employed in Pepsodent, and we offer a 10-Day Tube. See what it does when you use it. See the results in ten days. It will show you a way to clean your teeth as you never have cleaned them before.

See How They Glisten

Analysis shows that the film is albuminous. Pepsin digests albumin. The object in Pepsodent is to dissolve the film, then to constantly combat it. But pepsin alone is inert. It must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. So pepsin long seemed forbidden. Now a harmless, activating method has been found. And that method, used in Pepsodent, makes efficient pepsin possible.

Able authorities have proved Pepsodent by convincing clinical tests.

It has been adopted, and is now endorsed, by leading dentists everywhere.

It does what nothing else has done, and everyone should use it.

We urge you to prove it yourself. Ask us for a 10-Day Tube.

Look at your teeth and see what it does. See how they glisten. Look at your teeth and see what it does. See how they glisten. Do this for your sake and your children's sake.

Learn the way - the only way - to cleaner, safer teeth.
