INDUSTRIAL BOOST URGED

New Type of Slacker Disclosed at Realty Board Meet, Man Who Falls to Push Home Industry.

A new type of slacker was disclosed by A. G. Clark, manager of the Associated Industries of Oregon, in an address delivered at the regular meeting of the Portland realty board at the Benson hotel yesterday noon.

This particular slacker, Mr. Clark said, was the individual who failed to boost home industries.

Mr. Clark said, "The man who failed to boost home industries, was not all that was needed to make Oregon industries go over the top. He declared the need was for united action."

"If we have the united action of the people of the state our industries will be a success, our payrolls will grow and we will have a prosperous community."

Meanwhile he's taking a bad risk. Certainly he doesn't want to come home some night and discover her eyesight damaged beyond repair for lack of those glasses.
