SOCIALIST LEADER TALKS

Pantervold Says Sympathy in Allied Countries With Soviet Is Ever Growing.

LONDON.—The Norwegian socialist leader, Pantervold, gives an account of an interview with Lenin in the "Berger Tarwacht." The account, reprinted in the Manchester Guardian reads:

Referring to the allied intervention, Lenin said that it would become increasingly difficult owing to the ever-growing sympathy with the soviet movement in entente countries. Moreover, the red army was becoming stronger every day.

"Pantervold asked Lenin what he thought of the agrarian question. The answer was:

"We are divided into three groups—the half-peasants, or the country proletariat (who now, as formerly, sell their labor and are our best supporters), the little peasants and the big peasants. The last are naturally our opponents because we have taken land from them, but their resistance has been broken. The little peasants, as contrasted with the wealthier classes, are wavering. They usually oppose us in grain monopolies and desire free trade for their produce.

"In the country there is great lack of material and in the town of food. Our economic position is also very uncertain. The shortage of fuel is not the least serious factor. But as we have reconquered the immediate future, there is hope for the immediate future. Without this our position would have been untenable."

"Speaking of the freedom of the press, Lenin said:

"We believe that the so-called freedom of the press is the right of the bourgeoisie to cheat and deceive the proletariat. The bourgeoisie possesses all newspaper capital, printing material machinery and the papers themselves. With the press in its hands the bourgeoisie has unlimited power over public opinion. Freedom of the press is the same as freedom for capital and we suppress capital."

"Our motto is: The press for the proletariat, not for capital. As soon as the war against the bourgeoisie is over, it is possible that we may place printing works and paper at the disposal of a political party that desire to have a paper. But at present we are in the middle of a civil war. . . . We have already legalized the Menshevik party that publishes its official paper, the Ever Forward, in Moscow. I think that in the near future we shall be able to legalize the social revolutionary party. We shall also soon remove the muzzle from the opposition press according as the different parties are ready to work with us loyally and willingly."

"Investigation is invited. "Civil war is civil war, and it has its own laws. It is like this—either capital or the proletariat dominates. There is no other alternative. There are people who are not satisfied with our dictatorship. I tell them, 'Go to Siberia and see if the dictatorship there is any better.' We shall be glad to provide them with the necessary transport."

"No country has suffered so much in this war as Russia. How many millions of Russians have been sacrificed on the altar of capitalism. During the war I prophesied that the world war would become a class war. And so it has happened. "It is Utopian to think that capitalism can be exterminated without civil war. You know that the number of millionaires in Russia has increased ten-fold during the war. Do you think that Norwegian millionaires will capitulate in the face of arguments without blows?"

"Asked how he would effect the transition from a dictatorship to a democracy, Lenin replied:

LANDRU Baffles Police
MURDER CASE AGAINST MODERN BLUEBEARD WEAKENS.

No Trace Left of 13 Women Who Mysteriously Vanished—Wit Drives Jury to Frenzy.

PARIS.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Little headway has been made in the case of Landru, "the Cambais Bluebeard," as the French papers term him, who is charged by the police with being responsible for the disappearance of 13 women to whom he had promised marriage.

The police have been investigating for four months and four times a week Landru is taken from the prison of La Sante to the office of Judge Bonin whose questions as to the fate of the 13 women elicit from Landru evasive and at times very witty responses. They have got as far as sweetheart number three and Landru's flippant replies have nearly driven the judge to nervous prostration.

Yesterday the judge announced that he was going for a holiday. Landru immediately chipped in with the request that he, too, be permitted to take a vacation as the regime of La Sante did not agree with him. Might he not be allowed to go to his villa at Cambais and hold himself at the disposal of the court? It was from Cambais villa that Landru's future spouses disappeared never to be heard of again.

Judge Bonin was asking Landru this week how it was that his son who assisted him in removing the furniture of three of his fiancées did not make queries when moving that of Mrs. Guillin, the third removal of furniture in six months. "Did he not find it strange?" asked the judge. "My children obey my orders, they Landru. I have my misgivings as to do not accuse them," responded Landru. "I have my misgivings as to the way you bring up your children, Judge," he added sardoniously.

Landru contended that he had an order from Mrs. Guillin, drawn up in legal form giving him full power of attorney to administer her property. A document was not found among your papers, therefore, I must conclude that it never existed," said the judge.

"And as you and your police, with all the means at your command are unable to find Mrs. Guillin, I must, therefore, conclude that she never existed," countered Landru. Not one vestige of the missing woman has been found and the charge of murder against Landru is growing weaker. There is no "corpus delicti." The villa at Cambais has been ransacked by the police and ponds in the vicinity of the villa have been drained, but it would appear that the women have vanished into thin air. To questions as to the whereabouts of the whereabouts of the missing women, his relations with them prior to their disappearance, Landru invariably replies: "I am a man of the world. I cannot betray the confidence of women."

GOLDEN RULE NEED SEEN
SPEAKER ON ADVERTISING OFFERS REMEDY FOR UNREST.

Address Delivered in Green Room of Chamber of Commerce Under Ad Club Auspices.

Intensive application of the golden rule to business is the only practical solution of the labor and trade problems that confront the country today. In the opinion of Arthur Freeman, advertising director of Gimbert's of New York, who spoke Wednesday night at the green room of the Chamber of Commerce under auspices of the better business bureau of the Portland Ad club.

Mr. Freeman was introduced in a characteristically clever way by Frank Branch, who was chairman of the evening. The program having been arranged by Charles W. English, manager of the better business bureau. Representatives of leading mercantile firms of the city were present and the advertising managers of many of the houses to the number of about 150.

"Loss of confidence of a customer is a loss that few business men can estimate," said Mr. Freeman, in driving home the idea that effective advertising is that which tells exactly the truth about the article to which attention of possible buyers is attracted. Continuing, he said:

"An advertisement should be something more than a scrap of paper. It is one of the greatest forces in establishing and upholding the good name and good will of a business."

ENGLISH HEROES JOBBERS
ONE EX-OFFICER WITH ORDER OF EMPIRE IS IN FLIGHT.

Credentials Testifying to Unusual Abilities Are of No Avail in Getting Civil Positions.

LONDON.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—From all parts of the country come reports of the difficulty of getting a government appointment. He is armed with a letter from the war office thanking him for his services and adding: "The few people with greater organizing ability, more charming manners, greater tact and drive than yourself." Another letter to him from Sir Auckland Geddes, president of the board of trade, expresses "warm personal thanks for your loyal and devoted co-operation in very difficult work." King George bestowed on him the order of commander of the British Empire.

But these credentials have been of no avail in his quest for suitable employment in this country, and, in despair, he says that he is going to America next month. Ex-officers have discovered that the business world regards long military service as a disadvantage rather than an asset. An infantry captain, 43 years old, with a wife and three children, said: "I have farmed in South Africa, served with the Natal mounted police and prospected for gold. I want an outdoor job connected with agriculture, with a minimum salary of $1250. I cannot get one and I have applied for a small holding, but am told I may have to wait 12 months."

Another former officer reported that his firm would take him back at half his pre-war salary, saying that was the best they could do as trade was so bad. "Some companies don't know there has been a war on," commented a job-seeking officer who, before he went into the army was the head clerk in an insurance office. "My people have offered me $450 a year, and I am 28."
