Bitter Fight Develops at Bend Labor Union Conference.

STATE BOARD TO DECIDE

Visitors Are Entertained by Townspeople With Auto Trips, Boxing Show and Dance.

BEND, Or., Oct. 7.—(Special).—At the close of the second day of the convention of the State Federation of Labor being held here, delegates were cleared for action when a roll-call vote ordered the seating of delegates from Shipwrights local, No. 120, of Portland. The vote was in opposition to the recommendation made at the beginning of the afternoon session by the committee on credentials, and carried 25 to 27, many delegates refusing to take sides in the question. Debate on the committee's recommendation developed into a bitter fight on the convention floor this afternoon, delegates whose unions are affiliated with the maritime district trades council, and those of the building trades being definitely aligned for and against seating the shipwrights.

The fact that nearly as many delegates did not vote as those who carried the day, robbed the decision of any significance which it might otherwise have had.

The executive board of the state organization reserved the right, President Otto Hartwig stated, to act on the qualifications of the union to membership, after further advice is received from national labor headquarters. Temporary suspension of the local in question was the reason given by the credentials committee for asking that representation be not granted.

Unionists visiting in Bend were guests of the Bend Commercial club this morning, enjoying an auto tour through the country tributary to Bend. Some 30 automobiles were furnished by the business men, and the convention delegates were taken through the Grange hall, Powell Butte, Cline Falls, and Tumalo communities, before returning to Bend to take up the business of the day.

Tonight a boxing smoker, with Lee Morrissey of Seattle and Fred Gilchrist of Bend, as headliners, is being given, with a dance immediately following, for the entertainment of the visitors.

FAVORITISM IS CHARGED

SENATOR CHAMBERLAIN ASKS CROWDER RETIREMENT.

Amendment of Bill Sought on Ground That Preference Is Given Swivel-Chair Officer.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Oct. 7.—If it be treason, make most of it, charged Senator Chamberlain, this afternoon, when in a senate speech he charged Secretary of War Baker, with being guilty of favoritism in the treatment of officers and responsible for brutalities toward enlisted soldiers.

Senator Chamberlain was seeking to amend the bill retiring in charge of Crowder former judge advocate-general of the army, as a lieutenant-general. He sought to give similar recognition to several other officers who distinguished themselves in the war, among them General William C. Langhitt, who some years ago was stationed at Portland in charge of river and harbor improvements and General William L. Kenly, former chief of the air service who was decorated for service in Hughes aircraft investigation. Kenly was stationed at Vancouver barracks for several years.

General Leonard Wood also would have benefited by the Chamberlain amendment. The Oregon senator charged that the bill gave preference to a swivel chair officer over men who went to the front and bared their breasts to German bullets.

Nearsightedness Means Changes

Anyone wearing glasses because of nearsightedness really ought to watch the strength of their eyes very closely.

Nearsighted eyes change strength frequently, and therefore need to be examined about three times a year, instead of annually.

If there is no need to change lenses, we will tell you so. If there is need, you ought to know it for your eyes' sake.

Women's Activities

THE Portland Grade Teachers' association will hold an important meeting at 4:30 o'clock today in Library hall. After the business session the teachers will adjourn to the Benson hotel, where a dinner will be served. Teachers may obtain tickets for the dinner, from their representatives in each building. This will be a delightful gathering and one eagerly looked forward to by the teachers after their work in the school room and the business of the general meeting.

Miss A. Eldridge of New York, field secretary of the national organization of public health nursing and of the American Nurses' association, is an interesting visitor here. She has an itinerary that includes addresses at St. Vincent's hospital, Eugene, and today, St. Johns, at a public neighborhood meeting in the St. Johns library. The visiting Nurses' association, Miss Campbell of the Open Air sanatorium and others interested in public nursing, are among the patrons of her programme here.

Mrs. Sadie Orr-Dunbar, who has just returned from the Northwestern Anti-Tuberculosis conference, states that the meetings were most successful and that the society she represents has made a good showing and has received excellent co-operation throughout the state.

Members of the literature department of the Portland Woman's club are looking forward to their season of interesting meetings. They are scheduled for the first and third Fridays of each month and are to be held at the Central library. Miss Ethel Sawyer spoke at the first gathering and Miss Mary Frances Ison will give an address on October 17, when she will tell of experiences of conducting library work among the hospitals and in France. Mrs. G. H. Pettenger is chairman of the department and Mrs. J. M. Reeves is secretary.

It is to be hoped that all club presidents are sending the lists of their club delegates to Mrs. A. B. Coardley at Corvallis. The college town wants to know how many it is to accommodate.

It's an Opportunity

The up-to-date woman now runs her home upon the same business principles upon which her husband conducts his business. The keynote of success in each is efficiency and economy.

You never see a successful merchant doing trivial things in his own store—not because he doesn't know how, but because he can use his time more profitably. He doesn't make the things he sells because he knows the manufacturer who specializes in them can make them better and for less money. The modern woman attains the plane of intellectual equality and personal liberty only as she adapts these principles to her daily tasks—and she will find that one of her most efficient aids will be

WRIGHT'S AMERICAN-MAID BREAD

Because she will find that it will bring to the conduct of her household the cardinal qualities of efficiency and economy, and superlativeness as well.

EFFICIENCY

Don't bake—buy. A hot stove saps vitality. Flushes the skin. Ages prematurely. Lessens efficiency, or the ability to do other work of a more important type. Cook the things you can cook better for less money. That's duty. But don't bake bread when you can buy AMERICAN-MAID for less money—that's folly. Don't waste yourself uselessly.

ECONOMY

No woman can possibly bake a few loaves of bread, paying retail prices for everything, as cheaply per loaf as can a baker baking thousands of loaves by modern methods, buy materials in enormous quantities. It cannot be done. Do your own simple example in arithmetic. You'll find you are losing even more—Youth—Health—good looks. Nature exacts pay for waste.

SUPERLATIVENESS

The word superlative fits it like a glove. No substitute in it—just pure flour—the best that money can buy. Scientifically made after our own recipe by the best of modern machinery, in a clean, sanitary bakery, and wrapped in dust-proof, germ-proof wrappers. If you're an expert you might make it as good; you couldn't make it better.

Every bubble bursts in air. Quickly as I blow it. Lackawanna Underwear Lasts till you outgrow it.

IT is the custom in well conducted households to lay away a Lackawanna Twins garment as it is outgrown by boy or girl. The next younger child, growing up to it, finds it whole and perfect in every inch of fabric and every detail of button, buttonhole and seam.

In this continuous economy Lackawanna contrasts strikingly with underwear that grows down—shrinks—to smaller sizes. Lackawanna, sterilized in live steam, is preshrunk and nonshrinkable.
