Contender for Test Garden Comes Here for Rose.

SOUND CITY IS EXPOSED

J. A. Currey Tells of Selection of Perfect Lyons Rose for Ad- vertising Purposes.

When Tacoma wanted to snap the picture of its own emblematic rose, for the greater glorification of the "city of destiny," its rose society sent to a Portland garden for the flower that posed for the portrait of the perfect rose. Portland engravers prepared the half-tone. The Portland postoffice stamped the parcel. And a Portland rose, lent for the occasion, went forth to herald the pretensions of Tacoma.

"Alas, Tacoma! By the sounding sound of the American Rose society, the odoriferous fragrance of the fishing skiffs! What are these beside the fact, the most insurmountable fact, that Tacoma sought her own rose in her own garden, and found it not. A floricultural Mother Hubbard, lean and lachrymose, by the dimpling waves of Puget!

So much for the prelude, as J. A. Currey says, aimed at work on boomerang to wing the coveted prize of a national rose test garden, when the original claim already had been decided in favor of Portland.

Currey has "Dope." "Here's the dope—it's straight!" puffed Mr. Currey, western representative of the American Rose society. "Tacoma, beaten in an open field by Portland, has filed a separate claim for recognition as the site for a rose test garden, alleging that Tacoma represents a distinct and individual climatic zone, and that the climate of the metropolitan park board of Tacoma, is now in the east lobbying for the absorption of the fabled hope of the Eugene sound city.

"You see, the department of agriculture determines the locations of the zones, with one test garden allotted to each. Portland already has received official recognition, by recommendation of the American Rose society, though Tacoma was a pretender for the honor. The fact that this city already has a test garden in the garden, and that it is known far and near as a city where roses are a religion, clinches the matter in our town. Now Tacoma is attempting to create a separate climatic zone, with itself featured as the rose capital of the west.

"Here is a story that illuminates Tacoma's case. With pomp and ceremony some years ago the Tacoma Rose society adopted the Lyons rose as its emblem. The time came when they wanted a photograph of the rose, and a circular illustrating of this same rose—a showy flower that does not do very well. They searched through their own gardens and did not find a specimen fit to pose. All were inferior, small or defective. And they sent down here to Portland to the rose garden of Fred V. Holman, for the photograph of a perfect specimen of the Lyons rose. The picture was taken and the engraving made by a Portland engraving house."

Chamber Appealed To.
When grapevine rings came to the Tacoma tactical research, the Portland Rose society was agog, to phrase it mildly. J. A. Currey caught up his fashions—a better ribbed umbrella sounded the alarm. A delegation of enthusiasts rallied to the call and bore down on the Chamber of Commerce, where they petitioned Secretary Dodson to block the Tacoma attempt to designate a special brand of climate as proof for the establishment of a national test garden.

Secretary Dodson yielded—also saddled and stirrups. He vowed by the Portland rose that perfidy should be confounded. And he set his merry men to work without delay, for compiling statistics to show that the Portland and Tacoma brands of weather do not match. The premier roses of the world, and that no home is happy without 'em. In brief, the design is to knock Tacoma's contentions into a better world, and oblivion, which is a long way off.

Also, Secretary Dodson sent a message to Senator McNary, at Washington, bidding him carry the war to the department of agriculture, and if he sees Tacoma's trials, let him wobble about the corridors, to slay it forthwith and send its pelt to the tannery.

The American Rose society is to meet within two weeks. When it convenes the case will be laid before its august members, pro and con—with the latter argument largely featured by Tacoma.

CALL FOR FOOD IS MADE
"TRIPLE ALLIANCE" IN WASHINGTON HAS STRENGTH TEST.
Political Combine Is Asked to Aid Striking Tacoma Shipbuilders by Free Shipments.

TACOMA, Wash., Oct. 15.—Following a conference with C. R. Cottrell of Seattle, secretary of the recently formed triple alliance between the state grange, the State Federation of Labor and the Unions of Railway Workers, the relief committee of the Tacoma Metal Trades council today prepared to send an appeal to members of the grange throughout the state for food for striking shipbuilders here.

Mr. Cottrell sanctioned the plan, which will be a test of the strength of the triple alliance, which was formed for political purposes at the time of the last state labor convention in Beulah. The appeal, it was said by labor leaders here today, will call upon farmers to ship food to the Tacoma strikers free of all cost.

Various local granges, it is said, have repudiated the triple alliance, which purports to represent all farmers, railway men and union workmen in the state. The response to the appeal, it was said at labor headquarters, will show the strength or weakness of the alliance.

Moonshine Possessors Plead Guilty.
After a jury had been picked and sworn in, Dan Novonitch and Tom Costoff decided the jurors looked too much like prohibitionists and decided to withdraw their plea of not guilty of having moonshine in their possession and to throw themselves on the mercy of the court yesterday. District Judge Bell fined them $75 each.

DISEASE CASES INCREASE
SCHOOL INSPECTION NEEDED TO CHECK DIPHTHERIA.
Citizens Must Vote Increase in Tax Levy, in Order to Provide for Proper Medical Inspection.

Forty-two cases of diphtheria have been reported to the city health bureau within the last few days. The number of cases registered in the city health office increased from 24, yesterday morning, to 42. A portion of this number was discovered by cultures taken and brought to Dr. A. Hall, city bacteriologist.

Many of the cases are mild, and many of the people who are under quarantine are not sick, but have been in contact with the disease and are "carriers," and are sequestered in order to prevent the spread of the disease.

Among those suffering is Dr. P. J. Feniston, assistant city bacteriologist, who contracted the disease after taking cultures of 13 children.

City Health Officer Parrish said yesterday that the spread of the disease was due to the lack of school inspection. Through such inspection, Dr. Parrish maintains, pupils who are carriers can be discovered and sent home, but without it these carriers continue attending school, thus spreading the contagion among other pupils.

An appropriation of $10,000 to provide for adequate school inspection is included in the health department's budget for 1920, but City Commissioner Mann has announced that this sum cannot be allowed under existing financial conditions. If the proposed increase in the tax levy is voted by the people, provision for medical inspection in the schools will be made, said Commissioner Mann yesterday.
