

EX-ENSIGN SINKS RIVAL SANS TRACE

Lueata Mae Walker Passes Up Herman for Mr. Treece.

2 LICENSES, ONLY 1 GIRL

"Two's Company, Three's Crowd," So H. C. Reuther Pulls Stakes for San Diego Without Bride.

Even Dan Cupid recognizes the fact that it is always a woman's prerogative to change her mind. But for once in his match-making life, Dan must have been surprised at the rapid sequence of events during the courtship of Herman C. Reuther of San Diego and J. D. Manley Treece of Portland for the hand of pretty Lueata Mae Walker, Alameda apartment.

In this instance the busy little girl who seeks to guide the destiny of lovers proved herself a Portland booster. Recapitulation of the net results of his activities show that the San Diego swain has gone southward with an unused marriage license and a troubled heart as the only result of his whirlwind courtship, while the Portland man, a former ensign in the United States army, has secured the hand of the bride.

Just Monday Herman C. Reuther of San Diego appeared at the marriage license bureau with Mrs. Sarah E. Walker, mother of the present Mrs. Treece, and procured a license to wed the young woman. The girl's mother signed the license as the San Diego man's witness.

License Is Returned. The following day Miss Walker walked up to the marriage license bureau and laid Mr. Reuther's license down on the counter.

"I want this license canceled," she told the clerk.

Miss Walker was informed that it would be impossible to cancel a marriage license.

"Well," she said finally, "I want to get a new license."

And with E. W. Treece, 11 1/2 East Twelfth street North, as her witness, she procured a license to wed J. D. Manley Treece, 587 Flanders street, this city.

The marriage of Mr. Treece and Miss Walker was solemnized at the White Temple Tuesday evening, Rev. William A. Waldo officiating. Following the ceremony the parents of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Treece, tendered the young couple a dinner at the Portland hotel.

It was a little later by a reception at the Flanders street home.

Mistake, Declares Bride. "It was all a mistake," insisted the pretty bride yesterday, referring to the license procured by Mr. Reuther. "Naturally, it is something which I do not desire to mention, but I am worried about it. I have promised never to mention it to my wife, so I cannot discuss it now. No, I do not care to say whether I knew that Mr. Reuther had taken out a license the day before I did."

The bride's daughter, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Walker, Alameda apartments, Mr. Treece was in the naval service for 13 months during the war, rising from a "gob" to an ensign. He is now in the automobile business in this city.

After three days here the band will go to Astoria to spend November 12, 13 and 14, and will return here to spend November 15.

CEMENT SOLD IN SOUTH

COMPETITION SHOWN TO HAVE LASTED JUST 6 WEEKS.

California Official Asserts Business Rivalry Always Has Existed Between Two States.

Numerous cement sales were made in the extreme southern part of the state by the Oregon Portland Cement company during 1916, testified J. E. Moore, assistant sales manager of the defendant company, in offering testimony yesterday during the prosecution of the concern for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The government contends that the combination entered into by Pacific coast cement companies specified that the Oregon company was not to sell any cement south of Drain, Or., but Mr. Moore offered definite testimony to the effect that sales had been made farther south than Drain.

On cross-examination by United States Attorney Hinesy it was brought out that only for six weeks did the Oregon company offer a better price to dealers than did the California companies.

George C. McDonald, Portland agent for California cement companies, said from the witness stand that there is competition between the companies of the Pacific coast states, and he further asserted that his companies had sold their product in Oregon.

Similar testimony was offered by George T. Cameron, president of the Santa Cruz and Standard cement companies in California, who said there always had been competition between the companies of the two states. He was unable, under cross-examination, to show there had been any difference in the price quoted by the two companies except for the short period of six weeks during the early summer of 1916.

Additional testimony concerning the cost of producing cement was offered by L. C. Newland, superintendent of the Oregon company's plant at Oswego. He said the cost was $1.71 a barrel when the company first started to manufacture in 1910, and he further testified that the Oregon company had sold its product at a loss for the first six months of its operation.

WHYTE TALKS ON BRITAIN

EX-MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT EXPLAINS CONDITIONS.

Country Not Reactionary Toward Labor Unions, Editor Tells Members of University Club.

Public opinion in Great Britain is not reactionary toward labor unions, A. P. Whyte, editor of New Europe and a former member of the British parliament, told his audience last night speaking at the University club. Mr. Whyte is making a tour of America to study conditions in this country, and during his stay in Portland is a guest of Mrs. Hestor Ladd Cobbett.

The address at the University club on "The Labor Crisis in Great Britain" was a concise and instructive review of the history of industrial and political developments in that country since the cessation of hostilities, with an intimate insight into the texture of political parties, with which the speaker is familiar.

Motor transports left over from the war enabled the government to maintain a minimum of transportation services during the recent railroad strike, but it was the public sentiment of the country that enabled the government to win and that prevented the other labor organizations joining in a general strike in support of the railroad workers, the speaker averred.

"In a well-developed democracy like Great Britain no body of men nor no class of men has a right to demoralize the public service," said Mr. Whyte.

SLEEPING SICKNESS PROBED BY DOCTORS

Physician Reports on Study of Local Cases.

MALADY IS BAFFLING ONE

Strange Coma Not so Much to Be Dreaded as Some Imagine, Says Dr. House.

Description of four cases of lethargic encephalitis, or "sleeping sickness," were given to the city and county medical society last night by Dr. William House, who personally attended and observed each local instance of the strong malady that has at times reached the proportion of an epidemic frequency in the east and has now made its appearance in Portland.

Dr. House said the malady, while baffling in character, is not so much to be dreaded as is popularly imagined, statistics showing that the mortality is approximately 15 to 20 per cent. Of the four cases appearing in this city two have resulted in death and exhibited the marked symptoms that are associated with the disease, and that are of such character that it has frequently been confused with meningitis and polio-myelitis, or infantile paralysis.

Dr. House laid emphasis upon the assurance that Portland need not be alarmed at the appearance of the disease. Unlike its more epidemic form throughout the east, the percentage of recovery has been encouraging and the advent of a few such cases on the Pacific coast affords no reason for the presumption that it will become epidemic or occur in a consecutive manner. The disease is not highly epidemic, so far as it is known, he assured the society.

Strange Coma Described. In his talk on infantile paralysis, it was determined that the infection is received through the nose and throat passages, invading the base of the brain. Unlike its more deadly fellow, however, recovery is achieved without the penalty of paralysis, according to close observation of a few cases.

Dr. House described the strange coma that attends the illness, a drowsiness that borders closely upon unconsciousness, and which, in the case of the malady the layman's terminology of "sleeping sickness." In each of the four local cases the patients slept almost continuously, but in their brief intervals of wakefulness were in a condition that bordered upon coma, resting with half-closed eyes.

Despite this seeming unconsciousness, said Dr. House, a question to the patient would bring forth the intelligent response. Though the answers in most instances were brief, they were voiced as the patient rallied in the instant response to the question. A resolution was adopted recommending that the county court should consider a standard pavement, and that it be laid in such districts as may request.

The campaign committee also recommended that the county court should consider a standard pavement, and that it be laid in such districts as may request.

Stripped to the waist the patient exhibited the stump of his left arm, now practically healed, after a very unusual surgical operation which will permit the manipulation of an artificial hand with comparatively strong gripping power. By splitting the biceps tendon, bringing the upper half free from the stump, and attaching it with skin, thence coupling it to the lower half of the tendon, "purchase" had been procured for the appliance.

As a test an 8 1/2-pound weight was attached to the remodeled tendon by a cord. Flexing his biceps muscles the patient lifted the suspended weight as if it were a feather. When curious medical tugged at the cord, the sawyer flexed his arm muscles again and drew the weight to the right of the investigator toward him.
