JUDGE KELLY OF ALBANY TO PRESIDE AT TRIAL.

Injunction Suit Will Open Today on Use of County Funds for Payment of Gasoline.

Hearing of the well-advertised suit against Multnemah county commis-sioners brought by John W. Kaste to sioners brought by John W. Kaste to sujoin payment from county funds of gasoline bills incurred for fuel used in the private automobiles of the commissioners will open before Circuit Judge Kelly of Albany, sitting in Portland, at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. Local judges were desirous of dodging the task of deciding this action, and Judge Kelly was named by the styrems court to hear it.

Involved in the case is the right of the commissioners to bargain with the county, offering the free use of their automobiles when occupied by themselves on public business to the county in return for gratis gasoline, oil and tires. By resolution the commissioners granted this free supply to themselves and other county officials desiring to take advantage of the proposal, maintaining that it is a cheaper proposition for the county suto-mobiles.

Hordinary Judges Tucker, by Kavanaugh, Stapleton, Morrow, Tarbus, Well and Gantechein, Portland; Judge J. H. Bakt, McMinnville; Judge J. A. Eakin, Astoria; Judge Gustav Anderson, Baker; Judge J. U. Campbell, Oregon City, and Judge Fred W. Wilson, Dallas.

If You Would Be A Success

in a chosen field of work you must obtain a comprehensive view of the business world in general and a far-reaching knowledge of the best modern methods. This is more true of those in the financial field than in any other, for they must be competent to give trustworthy advice to many different classes of people, and to settle perplexing problems in both business and finance.

Realizing this, more than forty employes of the Ladd & Tilton Bank are taking the finest business course offered in America -that of the Alexander Hamilton Institute. That is a greater number than in any other bank west of Chicago.

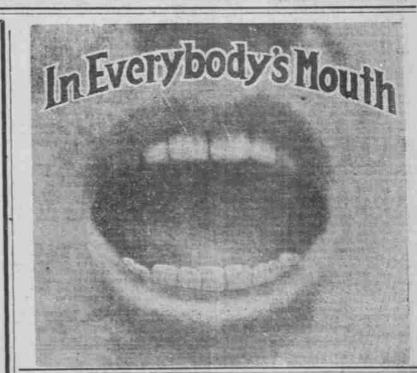

The public will recognize that such study will mean much in the way of helpful banking service in future years and a greater understanding of the problems daily met in the business world.
