

EMPLOYEE RECOUNTS BEAUREGARD KILLING

"What Made You Do It?" Dying Man Asks Wife.

"YOU WERE MEAN," REPLY

Plea of Temporary Insanity Withdrawn at Vancouver; Sole Witness to Tragedy Testifies.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Nov. 19.—(Special.)—"Woman, what made you do it," said Jules J. Beaugard, as he lay dying on the floor of his store, 102 Main street, shortly after his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Beaugard, had shot him with a .38 caliber special revolver on the evening of August 22, testified Edwin McLean, at the trial of Mrs. Beaugard today.

"If you hadn't been so mean, I would not have done it," Mrs. Beaugard replied.

"Mean, woman, I just gave you $120 and you've got everything in the world you want," replied the dying man, according to the witness.

Selection of the jury has occupied more than two days and was not completed until 11:45 o'clock today. The twelve jurors, four of whom are women, are: George W. Simmons, J. P. A. Gittings, James C. Johnson, R. P. Nelson, J. H. Goddard, Luther Baker, H. B. Sprague, Willie Thom, Lola Thorp, G. W. Hetrick, Minnie Hibbard, and Mrs. Nellie Edwards.

Insanity Plea Withdrawn. After the jury had been selected Henry Crabb, one of the attorneys for the defense, announced to the court that the plea of temporary insanity would be withdrawn. No reason for this action was given and no intimation was given as to what would be the line of defense.

W. E. Yates, county attorney made his opening statement.

Adjournment was taken until 1:30 o'clock and when Judge W. O. Chapman, who is trying the case, entered the court room, the crowd largely made up of women, went into the lobby so that the swinging doors could not be closed.

W. L. Vest, clerk working for Mr. Beaugard off and on for the past eight years prior to the killing, and steady for some years preceding, was the first witness to be called by the state. He was the sole eye-witness to the tragedy.

Shooting is Recounted. After describing the interior of the store and his usual custom in closing the store at night, Mr. Vest testified that Mrs. Beaugard had been in the store fully an hour before she killed her husband. She and her husband were talking but Mr. Vest did not pay much attention until shortly before the shooting. He then described how Mrs. Beaugard picked up a revolver from the desk inside of the wire cage surrounding the big safe and drew the revolver back over her right shoulder, lowered it behind her back, in a position, raised it with the aid of her left hand and fired, shooting her husband through the right forearm and the bullet entering the chest and fourth rib on the right side and badly injuring the liver.

Mr. Vest saw Mrs. Beaugard was about to take place and rushed to avert it, and was within three or four feet when the shot was fired. Mrs. Beaugard turned to one side and grasped the injured man and assisted him to lie down on the floor. He then rushed to the door and admitted three men who were on the street and called the police.

"She's Killed Me," Said Dying Man. Just before Mrs. Beaugard shot Mr. Beaugard, "Lizzie, don't do that," Mr. Vest testified. As Mr. Vest was helping Mr. Beaugard, the latter said, "Bill, she's killed me," Mr. Vest also said that Mr. Beaugard said, "You've had all you want," to which his wife replied, "If you hadn't been so mean, I wouldn't have done it."

Developed in the testimony that Mr. Beaugard said to his wife before she shot him that he had given her $120 so far that month and that he wanted to take his share of the profits and take a hunting trip for which he had been planning for some time. He had packed his fish basket and partly packed his suitcase and was to leave the following night.

Mr. Vest also testified that Mrs. Beaugard with a .32-caliber revolver and ammunition, with Mr. Beaugard's knowledge, she stated, she wanted to use at the house for protection. The witness acknowledged that she wanted the gun to protect herself during Mr. Beaugard's absence on the hunting trip as she would be alone with her daughter in their home at Twentieth and Main streets.

Mr. Vest Stays With Employer. Dr. Ralph Lieser, who was called, summoned an ambulance after making a hasty examination of the injured man and made a further examination after he was in the dressing room at the hospital. After consulting with Dr. Charles E. H. Flagg, it was decided that an operation was the only hope of saving his life, as he was bleeding profusely internally. The liver was found to have a large hole.

SAGE TEA READY TO DARKEN HAIR. It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous sage tea recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually. It's a well-known drug store here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because the faded hair, when applications of the gray hair vanisher and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted anymore. Get your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.—Adv.

MURINE Night and Morning. Have Strong, Healthy Eyes. If they Tired, Itch, Smart or Burn, Use Murine often. Soothe, Refreshes, Safes for Infants. Ask your Druggist. Write for Free Eye Book.

ATTEMPTS TO STOP WOOL AUCTION FAIL

Klamath Association Notified Plans are Perfected.

SHEEP MEN PESSIMISTIC

Secretary of State Says War Trade Board Alone Has Power to Prevent Boston Sales.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Nov. 19.—Wool growers are meeting with obstacles in attempting to prevent the importation and sale of Australian wool and the proposed auction at Boston seems likely to take place despite the combined protests of all wool-growing sections of the country. E. M. Hammond, president of the Klamath County Wool Growers' association, which has been energetic in opposing the sale, on the grounds that it spelled bankruptcy for every sheep man in Klamath county and the wiping out of a $2,000,000 investment, has received a letter from Representative N. J. Sinnott, enclosing the reply of the state department to Mr. Sinnott's protest on behalf of the wool growers.

Reply is Received. In the reply Robert Lansing, secretary of state, outlines the situation thoroughly. He says: "The only agency of the executive branch of the government which might conceivably have the authority to prevent the importation of this wool is the war trade board, now a section of the state department. In December, 1918, a request was made to the war trade board on behalf of the domestic wool growers to prohibit the importation of wool until July 1, 1919, but the board decided that the powers conferred upon it as a war agency did not include the right of maintaining import prohibitions or restrictions designed exclusively to protect domestic producers, and, accordingly, all restrictions on the importation of wool into this country from non-enemy sources were removed on January 1, 1919, and have not been reimposed. It appears, therefore, that the executive branch of the government has not received from congress authority to place restrictions on the importation of wool.

"It should also be pointed out that any effort on the part of this government to hinder the importation of wool would constitute a reversal of the attitude already adopted toward this question. In August the state department consented, in cooperation with the department of commerce, to assist the wool manufacturers of this country to carry on negotiations with the British government for the purpose of obtaining supplies of Australian wool. Although the decision has been promptly after the establishment of such auctions.

Relief is Denied. "The action taken by the state department in this matter was influenced by the fact that a sufficient supply of certain classes of fine wool does not exist in this country. It was recalled that since the tariff law of 1912, the free and unrestricted importation of wool in time of peace has been the settled policy of this country.

"In view of the facts that have been stated, it seems impossible for the state department to do anything to prevent the importation of the wool in question.

"With reference to the present status of the matter, I have little information, since the state department, as has been explained, has had no connection with the recent auction of the proposed auction.

The British government, it appears, plans to ship 40,000 bales of Australian and 10,000 bales of New Zealand wool to Boston for auction in December or later. Colonel Willey, who has been sent by the British government to make arrangements for the auctions, recently visited this country and is said to have announced that further monthly shipments of 20,000 bales might be made, if it seemed advisable.

Secretary of State Says War Trade Board Alone Has Power to Prevent Boston Sales.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Nov. 19.—Wool growers are meeting with obstacles in attempting to prevent the importation and sale of Australian wool and the proposed auction at Boston seems likely to take place despite the combined protests of all wool-growing sections of the country.

Reply is Received. In the reply Robert Lansing, secretary of state, outlines the situation thoroughly. He says: "The only agency of the executive branch of the government which might conceivably have the authority to prevent the importation of this wool is the war trade board, now a section of the state department. In December, 1918, a request was made to the war trade board on behalf of the domestic wool growers to prohibit the importation of wool until July 1, 1919, but the board decided that the powers conferred upon it as a war agency did not include the right of maintaining import prohibitions or restrictions designed exclusively to protect domestic producers, and, accordingly, all restrictions on the importation of wool into this country from non-enemy sources were removed on January 1, 1919, and have not been reimposed. It appears, therefore, that the executive branch of the government has not received from congress authority to place restrictions on the importation of wool.

"It should also be pointed out that any effort on the part of this government to hinder the importation of wool would constitute a reversal of the attitude already adopted toward this question. In August the state department consented, in cooperation with the department of commerce, to assist the wool manufacturers of this country to carry on negotiations with the British government for the purpose of obtaining supplies of Australian wool. Although the decision has been promptly after the establishment of such auctions.

Relief is Denied. "The action taken by the state department in this matter was influenced by the fact that a sufficient supply of certain classes of fine wool does not exist in this country. It was recalled that since the tariff law of 1912, the free and unrestricted importation of wool in time of peace has been the settled policy of this country.

"In view of the facts that have been stated, it seems impossible for the state department to do anything to prevent the importation of the wool in question.

"With reference to the present status of the matter, I have little information, since the state department, as has been explained, has had no connection with the recent auction of the proposed auction.

The British government, it appears, plans to ship 40,000 bales of Australian and 10,000 bales of New Zealand wool to Boston for auction in December or later. Colonel Willey, who has been sent by the British government to make arrangements for the auctions, recently visited this country and is said to have announced that further monthly shipments of 20,000 bales might be made, if it seemed advisable.

Secretary of State Says War Trade Board Alone Has Power to Prevent Boston Sales.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Nov. 19.—Wool growers are meeting with obstacles in attempting to prevent the importation and sale of Australian wool and the proposed auction at Boston seems likely to take place despite the combined protests of all wool-growing sections of the country.

Reply is Received. In the reply Robert Lansing, secretary of state, outlines the situation thoroughly. He says: "The only agency of the executive branch of the government which might conceivably have the authority to prevent the importation of this wool is the war trade board, now a section of the state department. In December, 1918, a request was made to the war trade board on behalf of the domestic wool growers to prohibit the importation of wool until July 1, 1919, but the board decided that the powers conferred upon it as a war agency did not include the right of maintaining import prohibitions or restrictions designed exclusively to protect domestic producers, and, accordingly, all restrictions on the importation of wool into this country from non-enemy sources were removed on January 1, 1919, and have not been reimposed. It appears, therefore, that the executive branch of the government has not received from congress authority to place restrictions on the importation of wool.

"It should also be pointed out that any effort on the part of this government to hinder the importation of wool would constitute a reversal of the attitude already adopted toward this question. In August the state department consented, in cooperation with the department of commerce, to assist the wool manufacturers of this country to carry on negotiations with the British government for the purpose of obtaining supplies of Australian wool. Although the decision has been promptly after the establishment of such auctions.

Relief is Denied. "The action taken by the state department in this matter was influenced by the fact that a sufficient supply of certain classes of fine wool does not exist in this country. It was recalled that since the tariff law of 1912, the free and unrestricted importation of wool in time of peace has been the settled policy of this country.

"In view of the facts that have been stated, it seems impossible for the state department to do anything to prevent the importation of the wool in question.

"With reference to the present status of the matter, I have little information, since the state department, as has been explained, has had no connection with the recent auction of the proposed auction.

The British government, it appears, plans to ship 40,000 bales of Australian and 10,000 bales of New Zealand wool to Boston for auction in December or later. Colonel Willey, who has been sent by the British government to make arrangements for the auctions, recently visited this country and is said to have announced that further monthly shipments of 20,000 bales might be made, if it seemed advisable.

Secretary of State Says War Trade Board Alone Has Power to Prevent Boston Sales.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Nov. 19.—Wool growers are meeting with obstacles in attempting to prevent the importation and sale of Australian wool and the proposed auction at Boston seems likely to take place despite the combined protests of all wool-growing sections of the country.

Reply is Received. In the reply Robert Lansing, secretary of state, outlines the situation thoroughly. He says: "The only agency of the executive branch of the government which might conceivably have the authority to prevent the importation of this wool is the war trade board, now a section of the state department. In December, 1918, a request was made to the war trade board on behalf of the domestic wool growers to prohibit the importation of wool until July 1, 1919, but the board decided that the powers conferred upon it as a war agency did not include the right of maintaining import prohibitions or restrictions designed exclusively to protect domestic producers, and, accordingly, all restrictions on the importation of wool into this country from non-enemy sources were removed on January 1, 1919, and have not been reimposed. It appears, therefore, that the executive branch of the government has not received from congress authority to place restrictions on the importation of wool.

"It should also be pointed out that any effort on the part of this government to hinder the importation of wool would constitute a reversal of the attitude already adopted toward this question. In August the state department consented, in cooperation with the department of commerce, to assist the wool manufacturers of this country to carry on negotiations with the British government for the purpose of obtaining supplies of Australian wool. Although the decision has been promptly after the establishment of such auctions.

Relief is Denied. "The action taken by the state department in this matter was influenced by the fact that a sufficient supply of certain classes of fine wool does not exist in this country. It was recalled that since the tariff law of 1912, the free and unrestricted importation of wool in time of peace has been the settled policy of this country.

"In view of the facts that have been stated, it seems impossible for the state department to do anything to prevent the importation of the wool in question.

"With reference to the present status of the matter, I have little information, since the state department, as has been explained, has had no connection with the recent auction of the proposed auction.

The British government, it appears, plans to ship 40,000 bales of Australian and 10,000 bales of New Zealand wool to Boston for auction in December or later. Colonel Willey, who has been sent by the British government to make arrangements for the auctions, recently visited this country and is said to have announced that further monthly shipments of 20,000 bales might be made, if it seemed advisable.

Secretary of State Says War Trade Board Alone Has Power to Prevent Boston Sales.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Nov. 19.—Wool growers are meeting with obstacles in attempting to prevent the importation and sale of Australian wool and the proposed auction at Boston seems likely to take place despite the combined protests of all wool-growing sections of the country.

Reply is Received. In the reply Robert Lansing, secretary of state, outlines the situation thoroughly. He says: "The only agency of the executive branch of the government which might conceivably have the authority to prevent the importation of this wool is the war trade board, now a section of the state department. In December, 1918, a request was made to the war trade board on behalf of the domestic wool growers to prohibit the importation of wool until July 1, 1919, but the board decided that the powers conferred upon it as a war agency did not include the right of maintaining import prohibitions or restrictions designed exclusively to protect domestic producers, and, accordingly, all restrictions on the importation of wool into this country from non-enemy sources were removed on January 1, 1919, and have not been reimposed. It appears, therefore, that the executive branch of the government has not received from congress authority to place restrictions on the importation of wool.

"It should also be pointed out that any effort on the part of this government to hinder the importation of wool would constitute a reversal of the attitude already adopted toward this question. In August the state department consented, in cooperation with the department of commerce, to assist the wool manufacturers of this country to carry on negotiations with the British government for the purpose of obtaining supplies of Australian wool. Although the decision has been promptly after the establishment of such auctions.

Relief is Denied. "The action taken by the state department in this matter was influenced by the fact that a sufficient supply of certain classes of fine wool does not exist in this country. It was recalled that since the tariff law of 1912, the free and unrestricted importation of wool in time of peace has been the settled policy of this country.

"In view of the facts that have been stated, it seems impossible for the state department to do anything to prevent the importation of the wool in question.

"With reference to the present status of the matter, I have little information, since the state department, as has been explained, has had no connection with the recent auction of the proposed auction.

ATTEMPTS TO STOP WOOL AUCTION FAIL

Klamath Association Notified Plans are Perfected.

SHEEP MEN PESSIMISTIC

Secretary of State Says War Trade Board Alone Has Power to Prevent Boston Sales.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Nov. 19.—Wool growers are meeting with obstacles in attempting to prevent the importation and sale of Australian wool and the proposed auction at Boston seems likely to take place despite the combined protests of all wool-growing sections of the country.

Reply is Received. In the reply Robert Lansing, secretary of state, outlines the situation thoroughly. He says: "The only agency of the executive branch of the government which might conceivably have the authority to prevent the importation of this wool is the war trade board, now a section of the state department. In December, 1918, a request was made to the war trade board on behalf of the domestic wool growers to prohibit the importation of wool until July 1, 1919, but the board decided that the powers conferred upon it as a war agency did not include the right of maintaining import prohibitions or restrictions designed exclusively to protect domestic producers, and, accordingly, all restrictions on the importation of wool into this country from non-enemy sources were removed on January 1, 1919, and have not been reimposed. It appears, therefore, that the executive branch of the government has not received from congress authority to place restrictions on the importation of wool.

"It should also be pointed out that any effort on the part of this government to hinder the importation of wool would constitute a reversal of the attitude already adopted toward this question. In August the state department consented, in cooperation with the department of commerce, to assist the wool manufacturers of this country to carry on negotiations with the British government for the purpose of obtaining supplies of Australian wool. Although the decision has been promptly after the establishment of such auctions.

Relief is Denied. "The action taken by the state department in this matter was influenced by the fact that a sufficient supply of certain classes of fine wool does not exist in this country. It was recalled that since the tariff law of 1912, the free and unrestricted importation of wool in time of peace has been the settled policy of this country.

"In view of the facts that have been stated, it seems impossible for the state department to do anything to prevent the importation of the wool in question.

"With reference to the present status of the matter, I have little information, since the state department, as has been explained, has had no connection with the recent auction of the proposed auction.

The British government, it appears, plans to ship 40,000 bales of Australian and 10,000 bales of New Zealand wool to Boston for auction in December or later. Colonel Willey, who has been sent by the British government to make arrangements for the auctions, recently visited this country and is said to have announced that further monthly shipments of 20,000 bales might be made, if it seemed advisable.

Secretary of State Says War Trade Board Alone Has Power to Prevent Boston Sales.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Nov. 19.—Wool growers are meeting with obstacles in attempting to prevent the importation and sale of Australian wool and the proposed auction at Boston seems likely to take place despite the combined protests of all wool-growing sections of the country.

Reply is Received. In the reply Robert Lansing, secretary of state, outlines the situation thoroughly. He says: "The only agency of the executive branch of the government which might conceivably have the authority to prevent the importation of this wool is the war trade board, now a section of the state department. In December, 1918, a request was made to the war trade board on behalf of the domestic wool growers to prohibit the importation of wool until July 1, 1919, but the board decided that the powers conferred upon it as a war agency did not include the right of maintaining import prohibitions or restrictions designed exclusively to protect domestic producers, and, accordingly, all restrictions on the importation of wool into this country from non-enemy sources were removed on January 1, 1919, and have not been reimposed. It appears, therefore, that the executive branch of the government has not received from congress authority to place restrictions on the importation of wool.

"It should also be pointed out that any effort on the part of this government to hinder the importation of wool would constitute a reversal of the attitude already adopted toward this question. In August the state department consented, in cooperation with the department of commerce, to assist the wool manufacturers of this country to carry on negotiations with the British government for the purpose of obtaining supplies of Australian wool. Although the decision has been promptly after the establishment of such auctions.

Relief is Denied. "The action taken by the state department in this matter was influenced by the fact that a sufficient supply of certain classes of fine wool does not exist in this country. It was recalled that since the tariff law of 1912, the free and unrestricted importation of wool in time of peace has been the settled policy of this country.

"In view of the facts that have been stated, it seems impossible for the state department to do anything to prevent the importation of the wool in question.

"With reference to the present status of the matter, I have little information, since the state department, as has been explained, has had no connection with the recent auction of the proposed auction.

The British government, it appears, plans to ship 40,000 bales of Australian and 10,000 bales of New Zealand wool to Boston for auction in December or later. Colonel Willey, who has been sent by the British government to make arrangements for the auctions, recently visited this country and is said to have announced that further monthly shipments of 20,000 bales might be made, if it seemed advisable.

Secretary of State Says War Trade Board Alone Has Power to Prevent Boston Sales.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Nov. 19.—Wool growers are meeting with obstacles in attempting to prevent the importation and sale of Australian wool and the proposed auction at Boston seems likely to take place despite the combined protests of all wool-growing sections of the country.

Reply is Received. In the reply Robert Lansing, secretary of state, outlines the situation thoroughly. He says: "The only agency of the executive branch of the government which might conceivably have the authority to prevent the importation of this wool is the war trade board, now a section of the state department. In December, 1918, a request was made to the war trade board on behalf of the domestic wool growers to prohibit the importation of wool until July 1, 1919, but the board decided that the powers conferred upon it as a war agency did not include the right of maintaining import prohibitions or restrictions designed exclusively to protect domestic producers, and, accordingly, all restrictions on the importation of wool into this country from non-enemy sources were removed on January 1, 1919, and have not been reimposed. It appears, therefore, that the executive branch of the government has not received from congress authority to place restrictions on the importation of wool.

"It should also be pointed out that any effort on the part of this government to hinder the importation of wool would constitute a reversal of the attitude already adopted toward this question. In August the state department consented, in cooperation with the department of commerce, to assist the wool manufacturers of this country to carry on negotiations with the British government for the purpose of obtaining supplies of Australian wool. Although the decision has been promptly after the establishment of such auctions.

Relief is Denied. "The action taken by the state department in this matter was influenced by the fact that a sufficient supply of certain classes of fine wool does not exist in this country. It was recalled that since the tariff law of 1912, the free and unrestricted importation of wool in time of peace has been the settled policy of this country.

"In view of the facts that have been stated, it seems impossible for the state department to do anything to prevent the importation of the wool in question.

"With reference to the present status of the matter, I have little information, since the state department, as has been explained, has had no connection with the recent auction of the proposed auction.

The British government, it appears, plans to ship 40,000 bales of Australian and 10,000 bales of New Zealand wool to Boston for auction in December or later. Colonel Willey, who has been sent by the British government to make arrangements for the auctions, recently visited this country and is said to have announced that further monthly shipments of 20,000 bales might be made, if it seemed advisable.

Secretary of State Says War Trade Board Alone Has Power to Prevent Boston Sales.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Nov. 19.—Wool growers are meeting with obstacles in attempting to prevent the importation and sale of Australian wool and the proposed auction at Boston seems likely to take place despite the combined protests of all wool-growing sections of the country.

Reply is Received. In the reply Robert Lansing, secretary of state, outlines the situation thoroughly. He says: "The only agency of the executive branch of the government which might conceivably have the authority to prevent the importation of this wool is the war trade board, now a section of the state department. In December, 1918, a request was made to the war trade board on behalf of the domestic wool growers to prohibit the importation of wool until July 1, 1919, but the board decided that the powers conferred upon it as a war agency did not include the right of maintaining import prohibitions or restrictions designed exclusively to protect domestic producers, and, accordingly, all restrictions on the importation of wool into this country from non-enemy sources were removed on January 1, 1919, and have not been reimposed. It appears, therefore, that the executive branch of the government has not received from congress authority to place restrictions on the importation of wool.

"It should also be pointed out that any effort on the part of this government to hinder the importation of wool would constitute a reversal of the attitude already adopted toward this question. In August the state department consented, in cooperation with the department of commerce, to assist the wool manufacturers of this country to carry on negotiations with the British government for the purpose of obtaining supplies of Australian wool. Although the decision has been promptly after the establishment of such auctions.

Relief is Denied. "The action taken by the state department in this matter was influenced by the fact that a sufficient supply of certain classes of fine wool does not exist in this country. It was recalled that since the tariff law of 1912, the free and unrestricted importation of wool in time of peace has been the settled policy of this country.

"In view of the facts that have been stated, it seems impossible for the state department to do anything to prevent the importation of the wool in question.

"With reference to the present status of the matter, I have little information, since the state department, as has been explained, has had no connection with the recent auction of the proposed auction.

The British government, it appears, plans to ship 40,000 bales of Australian and 10,000 bales of New Zealand wool to Boston for auction in December or later. Colonel Willey, who has been sent by the British government to make arrangements for the auctions, recently visited this country and is said to have announced that further monthly shipments of 20,000 bales might be made, if it seemed advisable.

Secretary of State Says War Trade Board Alone Has Power to Prevent Boston Sales.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Nov. 19.—Wool growers are meeting with obstacles in attempting to prevent the importation and sale of Australian wool and the proposed auction at Boston seems likely to take place despite the combined protests of all wool-growing sections of the country.

Reply is Received. In the reply Robert Lansing, secretary of state, outlines the situation thoroughly. He says: "The only agency of the executive branch of the government which might conceivably have the authority to prevent the importation of this wool is the war trade board, now a section of the state department. In December, 1918, a request was made to the war trade board on behalf of the domestic wool growers to prohibit the importation of wool until July 1, 1919, but the board decided that the powers conferred upon it as a war agency did not include the right of maintaining import prohibitions or restrictions designed exclusively to protect domestic producers, and, accordingly, all restrictions on the importation of wool into this country from non-enemy sources were removed on January 1, 1919, and have not been reimposed. It appears, therefore, that the executive branch of the government has not received from congress authority to place restrictions on the importation of wool.

"It should also be pointed out that any effort on the part of this government to hinder the importation of wool would constitute a reversal of the attitude already adopted toward this question. In August the state department consented, in cooperation with the department of commerce, to assist the wool manufacturers of this country to carry on negotiations with the British government for the purpose of obtaining supplies of Australian wool. Although the decision has been promptly after the establishment of such auctions.

Relief is Denied. "The action taken by the state department in this matter was influenced by the fact that a sufficient supply of certain classes of fine wool does not exist in this country. It was recalled that since the tariff law of 1912, the free and unrestricted importation of wool in time of peace has been the settled policy of this country.

"In view of the facts that have been stated, it seems impossible for the state department to do anything to prevent the importation of the wool in question.

"With reference to the present status of the matter, I have little information, since the state department, as has been explained, has had no connection with the recent auction of the proposed auction.

A Sale—A Sale of Shirts!

Thursday—Friday—Saturday Regular $3.50 $2.85 and $4 Shirts $2.85 Three Shirts for $8.00

Smart patterns in woven-color madras, Lorraine cords, and satin stripes, correctly cut and well made. A rare bargain. See my window display of these shirts—

Regular $1.50 Silk Four-in-Hands at 95c Four for Only $3.50 —Main Floor.

Just Received—Skolny Coats for Girls and Misses $30, $32.50, $35, $37.50, $40

Handsome, mannish garments of tweed, cheviot and novelty weavings, in ages 10 to 18 years. Intensely stylish and practical winter garments. —Second Floor.

Ben Selling LEADING CLOTHIER Morrison Street at Fourth

GOAL FOUND AT KLAMATH VEIN OF 18 INCHES STRUCK IN PROSPECT WELL.

Captain J. W. Siemens Here to Form Corporation That Plans $200,000 Sawmill.

Anthracite coal has been found to exist in the Klamath valley, a vein of 18 inches having been cut in drilling the prospect well that is being drilled at a depth of 700 feet in a hard rock formation through 100 feet of a hard rock formation. Captain J. W. Siemens, president of the Klamath Falls, who is here to attend the livestock show, brings news of the discovery.

The well is being drilled by a syndicate of local capitalists for the purpose of ascertaining what deposits exist under the location chosen. The special business that brings the southern Oregon banker to Portland at this time is the formation of a corporation that will build a $200,000 sawmill at Klamath Falls. The plant will receive its supply of logs from the Sprague river district over the Strahorn railroad.

The State Mountain Lumber company was organized last week by Captain Siemens and H. H. Edmonds, the latter an operator who has a mill located on the new rail line near its present terminus, and this plant is to be moved to a location on Sprague river.

Captain Siemens also brings information that the Ewauna Box company will erect a sawmill at a cost of $100,000, which will be in operation for the season of 1920.

William A. Marshall, chairman of the state industrial accident commission, passed the day in Portland looking after business matters.

H. A. Foster, Pineville, passed the day in Salem conferring with members of the state tax commission.

George T. Cochran, superintendent of water district No. 2, arrived here last night from La Grande to pass a couple of days conferring with the state engineer and attending a meeting of the state water board. He resides at La Grande.

G. A. Gardner, county judge of Jackson county, was a visitor in Salem for a few hours today.

Willard H. Wirtz, district attorney of Crook county, arrived at the capital this morning to pass a couple of days attending to business matters before the state tax commission.

Three allegations of the contest of the