PASTOR SEES NEED OF MORAL AUDACIT

"Goal of Man" Is Subject of Rev. W. T. McElveen.

"Man is a strange compound of special services began under the lead-majesty and meanness; weakness and ership of Mr. Dickson and his compower; transiency and transscendency.

greatest thinkers. Yet his favorite and frequent theme was the utter worthlessness of man and the trans-cendence of God. Calvin did some patient, persistent, penetrating thinking. Thinking men ever will be his debtors. But he said far too much about the deprayity in men and too little about the divine in men. "The theologians are not the only thinkers who err in this particular. Mr. Huxley described man as if cor-ruption was his father. Mr. Car-Mr. Huxley described man as if corruption was his father. Mr. Carlyle referred to the population of England as thirty millions, mostly fools.' Matthew Arnold looked down with contempt on all outside his own caste and called them barbarians. Emerson declared that the worst feature of charity is that it preserves lives that are not worth preserving. And there are still some preachers of the gospel who find more delight in talking about the acquired corruption of human nature than about its splendid possibilities.

Moral Audacity Need.

"From the lips of the Son of Man none of these libeling and villifying conceptions of human nature ever fell. Rather, Jesus indicated that man's fundamental peril is that he shall not think enough of himself, and shall not believe in his own carpacity for Jod. Leve was a specied. The world had been so long time with build the vision of the Christ into human society as the prophet of old built him, will be to establish the coming of Jesus into this world. I remember too, that, that tragedy was enacted even by those who had vigorously sought and looked for his coming. The world asks for Jesus to come, many in the world believe that things are to be righted by bringing back the Lord Jesus to the earth. But pray tell me, what more could he do than he did, should be come? It is the supreme question of the hour.

"What would Jesus say to this enlightened. Christianized age, but the very thing he said to Phillip so long ago, have I been so long time with you and dost thou not know me? The world needs a prospective Christ as much as a retrospective Jesus. For all phases of life, business, industry, government, education, religion, to built the vision of the Christ into human society as the prophet of old built him, will be to establish the Needed, Says Dr. Morrison. "Not finer clothes for your body but finer substance for your spirit is what God wants you to have. If you have forfeited your inheritance from God it is because you serve false gods," said Dr. A. A. Morrison, rector of Trinity Episcopal church, in his sermon yesterday morning.

In speaking at the First Methodist church last night on "Capital Punish-ment-Is It Christian?" Dr. Stansfield "Man is a strange compound of majesty and meanness; weakness and power; transiency and transscendency. As Dr. Johnson suggests. "Man is both a groveller on the earth and the gazer at the sky." Man is composed of two elements; one grain of dust to one of diety. But essentially man is not dust; he is divine."

So said Dr. W. T. McElveen in his sermon yesterday morning at the First Congregational church. His topic was "The Goal of Man."

He continued by saying, "Be ye perfect." That injunction is not the moral prospectus of a fanatic; it is not the exhortation of an idle dreamer. It is the edict of one who was the greatest and best of men and who ever knew what was in men.
