

STORM-BOUND GLAD TO GET OREGONIAN

Householders Are Surprised When Papers Are Delivered.

"CIRCULATION" ON JUMP

Street Cars, Taxicabs, Motor Trucks and Bob Sleds Pressed Into Delivery Service.

"Well, I never! Here's our paper! I wonder how they ever got it out here."

The housewife who made the remark yesterday morning as she picked her morning paper off the porch of her Kenilworth avenue home echoed the pleasant sentiment of thousands of snowbound suburbanites who depend on their paper to give them the latest developments of such happenings as record snow storms.

"There'll be service on the Lents Vancouver and St. Johns lines," said the car company officials. This was late Tuesday night. A few hours later no service on the Lents line, said the car company. In the meantime, where were made, as for all other lines, to transport the papers by taxis to the point where carriers get their quota.

Shortly before midnight "No service on the Vancouver line," and further arrangements were made. Then, soon after midnight, "No service on the St. Johns line," and all reliance on the cars was abandoned. The taxis were mobilized at midnight. A few were stuck. The others saw their plight.

Taxi Drivers Quit. "Six," said the taxi drivers as they have to and tacked back to their garages.

Six trucks were then called in by the circulation department. They reported at Sixth and Alder. "We're here to do what the P. R. L. & P. can't," was the brag of the leader. A few minutes later his engine died, less than two blocks gone, and two of his companions were in the same fix. One truck got stuck as a Thirtieth and Sandy, where the carriers came to meet it. Another got to Twenty-eighth and Grand, where carriers unloaded it and took their papers the rest of the way to their routes. The rest got to Ninth and Hawthorne, and the load had to be redistributed. This was on Wednesday morning.

On Wednesday Circulation Manager Hopwood called out ten sleds, two horses, a driver and paper caretaker to each. Until P. M. on Wednesday the sleds skidded along delivering their belated burden. The scheme worked well, and deliveries of Thursday's papers was even more successful. The great majority of snow-bound families who wanted the news, and were resigned to the likelihood of waiting till a thaw for it, were delighted to get their papers when they reluctantly left their beds yesterday morning.

Boys Reap Harvest. There was a general flow of "appreciation money from subscribers to the carriers on Wednesday and also yesterday. People who were not expecting papers found themselves digging into their pockets at sight of a snow-decked lad at the door with a paper in his hand.

"I got $3.40," reported a Portland Heights carrier, "and a doctor on my route made me come in and get a meal. It was some meal, too. But I believe, by golly, I got a dollar because I stopped to eat it."

Lents was the longest haul for the sleds. But the sleds were a real help. The wading through the snow kept none of the carriers out of the game, the element of sport appealing to all.

Mr. Hopwood and two assistants were at work for 48 hours at the source of supplies at Sixth and Alder. All three got a rest yesterday afternoon, and are back to look after any further difficulty which may crop up.

"All the 240 carriers within the city limits are reporting deliveries," said Mr. Hopwood last night. "We are not to sure of 150 in the suburbs which extend 40 miles out from the city limits each way. But where anyone can go, our carriers go."

CHINESE IS INDICTED

GRAND JURY HOLDS LOW SING ON BURGLARY CHARGE.

Alleged Jewelry Store Robber and Holdup Man Also Accused in True Bills Returned.

Low Sing, alleged Chinese burglar, who was captured by Viola Abbott and Linnie Dietrick, after a wild struggle in which bottles were scratched, hair torn out by the roots and arms and hands bitten, when the man was leaving the apartment of Miss Abbott, 549 Everett street, was indicted by the Multnomah county grand jury yesterday for daylight burglary. He is the same man who was caught with a taxicab driver in his hands in a hallway of the Multnomah hotel recently, and put up a fierce fight for freedom.

George Lang, brought back from Seattle after his arrest there while attempting to pawn nine of 20 watches which are alleged to have been stolen from the store of Louis Gilbride, 173 Third street, Portland, was indicted for larceny.

Lambo Metseff and Leonard von Wingerden, alleged I. W. W. organizers, were indicted under the syndicalism act. The former was arrested at 875 Minnesota avenue, alleged I. W. W. holder, and the latter in Second street, following hours.

Earl Snyder, Laurence Murray and T. H. Sorenson, young men already indicted for the robbery of Rev. H. E. Cash, were indicted on a second count for the hold-up of V. C. Krentz, who was robbed of his watch and money November 25.

A. W. Hewitt and H. Candigole, who are accused of having attempted to assault and rob a taxicab driver, and A. R. Wright, said to have attacked a girl, were also indicted in true bills returned by Deputy District Attorney Pierce.

Club Has Criminal History of Pioneer Days.

Eugene Sheriff Uncerths Oak Bindings That Figured in Ancient Murder Trial.

EUGENE, Or., Dec. 11.—(Special.) A bit of criminal history of Lane county was recalled yesterday, when Sheriff Fred G. Stickels, in cleaning out an old room in the basement formerly used by the sheriff as a storeroom, unearthed a stout oak club, which was an exhibit in the several trials of James E. McCabe of Mohawk valley, accused in the seventies of killing Albert Monroe Zumwalt with a club.

McCabe was killed April 27, 1876, and McCabe was arrested in May charged with manslaughter. The grand jury indicted him November 11 that year, according to the record, and his first trial was held soon afterward. The jury disagreed and two more trials were held, each jury failing to arrive at a verdict.

On April 17, 1875, the district attorney filed a motion to dismiss the case for the reason that it became impossible to secure a conviction, and McCabe was finally freed from custody. Old residents of the county say that these trials attracted wide attention.

The club in question is four feet long and is said to have been used to prevent a horse from jumping fences.

LUCAS FAGED MOB, WITNESSES TESTIFIES

Refuge Sought at Dayton, Wash., Says Rev. B. C. Miller.

PRACTICE HELD FAILURE

Patient of "Healer" Dies, Asserts Witness at Trial of $50,000 Libel Suit Against Telegram.

Almazon Ira Lucas was nearly mobbed following an indignation meeting of citizens of Dayton, Wash., in 1912, and met with poor success in the healing of the sick of that community, according to the testimony of Rev. B. C. Miller to whom, as minister of the Baptist church in Dayton, Lucas was said to have fled for protection, Rev. Miller was on the witness stand in the $50,000 libel suit against the Portland Evening Telegram, which was resumed in the court of Circuit Judge Tucker yesterday.

From his own experience, the witness related one attempt at healing in which he met with a very fair promise of good health had been made by Lucas, died.

Rev. Miller now lives in Albany, having gone into farming and the grocery business since a nervous breakdown in the ministry.

Mob Threats Asserted. Lucas came to the parsonage, seeking refuge, the witness testified.

"He promised to leave the city immediately, if I could see he got away safely," said Rev. Miller. "I believe he intended to carry out his promise but as he met the sheriff with a warrant as he was leaving, I was some time later when he left."

The witness testified that Lucas' reputation for morality and fair-dealing was had in the city of Dayton.

"I was acquainted with the leading citizens of the town and can say that there was not a man of influence or standing in Dayton who did not have the same opinion of Mr. Lucas and who did not believe that he was one of the worst influences among the young people that ever came to the city," declared Rev. Miller.

"Do you know of your own knowledge that Mr. Lucas was immoral or a cheat?" demanded Attorney Jacobson for the plaintiff.

"Only from what I have been told," "Then you base your opinion of his reputation wholly on hearsay evidence?"

"Certainly, that is the only way one can establish reputation."

The witness denied that any hostile feeling was felt toward Lucas by ministers, physicians or other professional men because he was cutting on their work.

"I did you have any knowledge that would lead you to believe he was not successful in the practice of his profession as a healer?" asked the attorney for the plaintiff.

"I know of only one case personally. A member of my congregation was very ill and was being treated by Lucas. His condition was hopeless, according to physicians who had been attending him. He became despondent, ceased going to physicians and gave himself into the hands of Lucas. I visited him as a minister and knew he was rapidly nearing the end, even a novice could tell he was dying by inches."

"He told me he was feeling much better and soon would be able to come to church by himself. I told him frankly that I could not believe him and that it would be well for him to get his house in order. He said he knew better, that he was being healed by Mr. Lucas."

"I remember, he died the next day."

Lucas' Degree Attacked. Rev. Miller denied that Lucas had any degree, but he had a "D. D." or divine vestiture. Speaking from an experience of 16 years as a Baptist minister, he said that the degree was conferred by some denominational institution only and never self-awarded.

M. F. Brady, manager and owner of the Railway Equipment company, said he recalled the story of Otto Grau, a former employe, which led to the investigation and newspaper articles, which he said Lucas had threatened Grau with insanity in less than six months.

"You don't need six months, you're crazy down if you give him $300," I said to Grau, and advised him not to go back to Lucas and not to draw his money from the bank," said the witness.

William F. Brady, son of the preacher, said he recalled the story of Grau and his suit case from the influence of the "healer" in the divorce case across the Columbia river between Oregon and Washington at a point two miles west of Cascade Locks, Or.

The same bill also would grant a license to construct and maintain the approach to the bridge on the Oregon side over property belonging to the United States.

The national rivers and harbors congress, in session here today, went on record against granting to the interstate commerce commission power over port-to-port rates by water, except insofar as may be necessary in effecting interchange of traffic between rail lines and water lines.

Commercial organizations of several Pacific coast cities have been registering an effort to give such powers to the interstate commerce commission in the pending railroad legislation.

"If there is such a thing as a 'Jinx,' Lucas surely put it on me this summer," complains Otto Grau, the man whose story started the Telegram in its campaign against Lucas, in an intensely dramatic deposition taken in Sacramento last August and read before the jury yesterday morning. The evil influence of Lucas continually haunts him, driving him from city to city, his deposition said. It was the man who told the Telegram that Lucas had said he could only be saved by going to Lucas and this was done by taking a course of treatment from the "healer" at a cost of about $300.

Lucas Allowed to Stay in Room. When the deposition was read about to be taken in Sacramento, last summer, Harrison Allen, attorney for the newspaper, protested against the presence of Lucas and his wife in the room at the time Grau was testifying. This was part of the record read. Allen's deposition said. It was the witness' testimony that Lucas and his wife, declared there would be no deposition if his client was not allowed to stay in the room.

TACOMA GAINS 25 POUNDS

Mrs. Hall Says She Owe Her Present Good Health to Tanlac.

"I don't believe that I would be here today if it hadn't been for Tanlac," was the remark of a slender woman by Mrs. Sadie Hall of 1424 East Twenty-sixth street, Tacoma, Wash., while talking to the Tanlac representative recently.

"During the past three years I have suffered something frightful," continued Mrs. Hall. "I lost weight until I was a mere frame and so weak that I would faint if I tried to move about. I tried every treatment and medicine I had ever heard of, but instead of getting better I was growing worse until the time that I was taken to a trouble of any kind and never felt better in my whole life."

"Indigestion troubled me so bad that I would rather go without anything to eat than to suffer the consequences and for three years I ate so little that I was nearly starving to death. The little I managed to force myself to eat caused me to bloat up so bad with gas that I was pressed up around my heart and lungs and cut my breath off so that I had to walk with a cane and I was so nervous I couldn't retain hardly a thing I had eaten and I got so bad that I would do nothing but eat and even then I could not keep it down. I had pains all over my body and it even hurt me to go to bed and my kidneys were badly troubled so bad that the pains across my back were terrible. My liver was sluggish and I was badly constipated and often would have dreadful headaches and dizzy spells. I was so nervous that I would jump if anyone knocked on the door and I couldn't sleep at night but would often get up and walk the floor the whole night."

"Tanlac was a godsend to me, and as long as I live I will never be able to forget the relief that it has given me to realize the change that has come over me, why it seems almost impossible to believe that I was ever in such a condition. Tanlac has completely overthrown every trouble I had and put me in a fine state of health. I am now a strong, healthy woman in my life. I can eat anything and everything I please and digest it perfectly and never have a sign of indigestion. I sleep like a baby and my general condition and the pains across my back have disappeared altogether. I am no longer constipated and I do not have dizzy spells or a thing of the kind. I am so steady that I sleep like a baby and I have gained twenty-five pounds, as I said, and am stronger than I was in years and just feel so happy to be free from that awful condition I was in. I don't believe it is possible to say too much for Tanlac and I will always praise it to my dying day."

"Tanlac is sold in Portland by the Oregon Retail Drug Co."

"I was acquainted with the leading citizens of the town and can say that there was not a man of influence or standing in Dayton who did not have the same opinion of Mr. Lucas and who did not believe that he was one of the worst influences among the young people that ever came to the city," declared Rev.
