Next Year Is Under Way.

Construction of the new Montgomery Ward plant on the site of the old fair grounds, which promises to be the costilest building enterprise in Portland during the coming year, was begun this week, when steam shovels began the excavation for the structure.

A force of about 25 man began

A force of about 25 men began working this week with the shovels, and it is estimated that between 25, 1000 and 40,000 yards of earth will have to be moved. The basement floor of the building will be built only a few feet below tife surface of the ground, making outside windows available for lighting. The railway tracks which will provide for the loading and unloading of goods directly in the building will be upon this level. Additional excavation will be needed for the boiler rooms, which will be constructed on a lower level. Offices for P. A. Wells and J. R. Patterson of Wells brothers, Chicago firm in charge of building, have been opened in the Yeon building, have been opened in the Yeon building, and erection of a small building has been started upon the grounds where offices also will be maintained. The contract for excavating has been awarded to the Cooke Excavating company, a local firm, on a per yard basis.
