JOY OF GIVING TO KIDDIES DIMS EYES

Light of Pleasure in Wan Little Faces Is Reward.

HUNDREDS MADE HAPPY

Elks in Role of Santa Dispense Joy and Goodles to Tots From Poor Families.

There is a perfunctory Christmas spirit which impels grown-ups to give to others gifts they cannot afford to buy for themselves, but the real spirit of old Saint Nicholas lives in the hearts of the young and of those older persons who see Christmas through the eyes of their children or the kiddles of other people at Christmas time-ask a "big brother" of the Elks if this is not true.

Nowhere in Portland was the true Yule spirit better displayed than in the municipal auditorium yesterday, where shricks, whisties and a chorus of wondering exclamations greeted a giant Christmas tree and the appear ance of Santa Claus at the first annual Christmas celebration held by Portland lodge, Benevolent and Pro-Portland lodge, Benevolent and Pro-tective Order of Elks, for more than 1700 youngsters, many of whom oth-erwise would have known Christmas only as a day on which mamma or papa did not work and there was no

Joy Lights Little Faces.

As the children trooped up on the big stage, feasting their eyes on the mammoth tree, and passed down along lanes where toys, candy and fruits were given freely, on the lips of the "big brothers" and wives who were watching or directing the marchers were smiles, but in their eyes were toors. toars. For there was pathos as well as pleasure in watching changing faces, many of them pinched by lack of nourishing food, as large eyes lit with joy on being given gifts for their "really truly own."

The presents were well worth while, too. They were arranged on long counters, divided as to age. There were wooden wagons and stockings of gimeracks for the kid-dles up to 5 years. There were dif-ferent selections of toys for children from 5 to 8, from 9 to 12, from 12 to 15. There were building blocks, books, water pistols, structural toys, dolls, games, toy brooms, cars, etc., and many were the joyful cries of pleasure as the youngeters sat on the sidewalks outside the auditorium for their first real examination of their prizes. Each received at least two toys. Each child received a basket contalning real treasures, including an extra large size orange, two apples, half a pound of candy, animal cookies, candy cane, haif a pound of nuts, a popoorn bar and sugar cookies. 2200 Baskets Prepared.

In all the Elks prepared 2200 bas-kets and 2200 sets of toys. Five hun-dred baskets and toy sets were distributed to children at the poor farm, the Cedars, Louise Home, the Crittenton home, the Albertina Kerr nursery and the children's wards at the Good Samaritan and St. Vincent's hospitals. The remaining 1700 were given away at the auditorium following the Christians everyless. Christmas exercises, which began at 11 o'clock and to which were invited youngsters from poor families in every part of the city. All of the oungsters were admitted only by icket, names having been furnished the Elks by school principals, the Parent-Teachers' association and other organizations, as well as indi-

Approximately $5000 was raised among the Elks for this event, which promises to be an annual affair. Its success was attested to by nearly 2000 children and all the older folk who attended.

Long weeks of work were neces-sary in the preparation of the tree and presents, several all-night sessions having been devoted to the plans and arrangements. George O. Brandenburg was chairman of the Christmas tree committee and Monroe Goldstein secretary-treasurer.

Mayor Welcomes Youngsters. The programme was opened at 11 e'clock with an organ prelude by Ralph W. Hoyt. Mayor Baker delivered a speech of welcome to the youngsters, telling them that the day was theirs to make the most of Webber's juvenile orchestra played, there was a solo by Master Rosen-krantz and three reels of motion pictures. Two of them were of comic nature and the concluding one was of interesting pictures of Oregon wild life taken by W. L. Finley.

Then, while the big auditorium was in darkness, there flashed from the top of the great Christmas tree, revealed by rises corrected.

top of the great Christmas tree, revealed by rising curtain, the greeting, "Merry Christmas." As it faded out there was a glow of red and green lights behind the big tree, which glistened with tinsel and sparkled with ornaments. The light grew stronger and finally a myriad of incandescents of white, red and green outlined the branches. outlined the branches.

Santa Claus Greets Kiddles. Throughout the lighting there was continuous chorus of "ohs," "ahs," glad shricks, plercing whistles and the like from the clamoring audience stage. Cary Houseman contributed a jovial Santa Claus.

Credit for the excellent lighting effects was due to Tom Huffaker, stage manager of the anditorium.

All the members of the big committee of "big brothers" named by Exalted Buler Berg worked long and hard to make the affair of yesterday a complete success. They were:
George O. Brandenburg, chairman: Monroe Galdstein, secretary-treasurer; W. F. McKenney, J. H. Joyce, William Strandborg, Broderick a complete success. They were converged by the success. They were a complete success. They were decorated by the success of the success. They were decorated by the success of the success of the success. They were decorated by the success of the success

PARIS. Dec. 25.—The newspapers announce that the government has decided on new measures to remedy the coal crisis. One pian is for turning the clocks ahead an hour for the purpose of conserving fuel used for illuminating purposes.
