

MERCIER CALLS HERDING OF BELGIANS "BRUTAL"

"Clergy Demand a Place in the Vanguard of the Persecuted," Cardinal Writes. "I Record This Request With Pride," He Tells Von Bissing.

CARDINAL MERCIER'S STORY.
Including his correspondence with the German authorities in Belgium during the war, 1914 to 1918, edited by Professor Ferdinand Mayence of Louvain University and translated by the Benedictine monks of St. Augustine's, Ramsgate, England.

(Copyright by Public Ledger. Published by Arrangement.)
Explains the story of the Belgian people during the war, 1914 to 1918, as told by Cardinal Mercier.

IN HIS defense of Belgian workmen doomed to slavery in the German empire, Cardinal Mercier was spokesman for thousands of patriots whose spiritual armor was as strong as their material weapons were weak. Lamenting the burghomaster of Brussels, successor of the late King, who early in the war had been imprisoned in Germany, refused to denounce the invaders the lists of the unemployed, and the remarkable handbill appeared on morning on the board of the capital:

WE WILL NOT GO!
The people of Brussels understand. They do not obey the demands of the Germans. They are not going to allow themselves to be led as sheep to the slaughter. In a great number of communities many men have not presented themselves; they have not been disturbed. Those who have surrendered themselves have been led away. Shame on those who present themselves because of selfishness or because they have a certificate of compliance or because they are certain of being placed at liberty.

All for each one! Each one for all! A Belgian who works for Germany fights against his Fatherland. Let them organize their man-hunt; we will hide ourselves.
Long live the Fatherland! Long live the King!
We will not go!

That many eventually did go is proof of the magnitude and madness of the German oppression. In Brussels, however, the deportations were fewer than in certain of the smaller exclusively industrial centers. Boldness, even if it came from a sense of almost an embarrassment to the Prussian system.

(Continuation of Chapter XXX—The Deportation of the Unemployed.)
In a fresh letter to Baron von Bissing, the cardinal maintains that his arguments have been left unanswered; he protests once more against the brutal way in which the recruiting of the so-called unemployed everywhere takes place.

Archbishop of Malines, November 29, 1918.
To His Excellency Baron von Bissing, Governor-General of Belgium:
The letter which your excellency does me the honor to write me, dated November 23, is disappointing. In several circles that I have reason to believe well-informed, it was asserted that your excellency had felt it your duty to lay a protest before the highest authorities of the empire against the regulations you were forced to apply to Belgium. I counted, therefore, at least some delay in the application of these measures, pending a fresh examination and in mitigation in the method of executing them.

But lo and behold! without a word of answer to one of the arguments by which I proved in my letters of October 19 and November 10 the illegality and inhuman nature of the condemnation of the Belgian workmen to forced labor and deportation, your excellency returned to yourself to repeating in your letter of November 23 the very text of my letter of October 26. These two letters are, in fact, identical both in matter and form.

On the other hand the recruiting of the so-called unemployed is carried out most of the time without any regard to the observations of the local authorities. Many of the men in my hands bear witness that the clergy are brutally kept at a distance, the mayors and local councilors, if present, are reduced to the role of spectators in the presence of individuals unknown to them and arbitrarily make their choice from among their number. Instances of this abound. I will give you two recent examples from a crowd of others which I hold at your excellency's service.

On November 21 the recruiting of forced labor took place in the village of Kerbeek-Miscom. Of the 1325 inhabitants of the commune, the recruiting officers took away 94 in a body without distinction of social status or profession; farmers' sons, men who have support aged and infirm parents, fathers of children who left wife and children in want; men who were as useful to their families as their daily bread. Two families, both of them, saw four sons carried off at the same time. Of the 94 thus deported, only two were really unemployed.

In the region of Aerschot the recruiting took place on November 23. At Rillaar, a village of 1000 inhabitants, young men who supported their widowed mothers, farmers, the heads of numerous families—one of them more than 50 years of age with 10 children—cultivating the land and owning several head of cattle, who had never received a penny from public charity, were taken away by force in spite of all their protests. In the little village of Rillaar, as many as 25 young men of 17 were taken away.

Your excellency would have wished that the communal authorities be complicit in these odious recruitings:

NAME "BAYER" ON GENUINE ASPIRIN

For Pain, Colds, Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache

BAYER
You want relief—quickly and safely! Then insist on "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," stamped with the "Bayer Cross."
The name "Bayer" means you are getting genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over eighteen years, and proved safe by millions of people.

For a few cents you can get a handy tin box of genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," containing twelve tablets. Druggists also sell boxes of "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monocrocin, Germany.

neither their legal position nor their conscience would allow them to do so. But they could have enlightened the "recruiters" and are specially qualified for that. Priests, who know the common people better than anyone else, could render these officials valuable help. Why is their assistance refused?

At the end of your letter your excellency reminds me that professional men are not molested. If only the unemployed were taken away I could understand their exception. But if the able-bodied are enrolled indiscriminately that exception is unfair. It would be iniquitous to throw the whole burden of deportation on the working classes. The middle classes ought also to share in the sacrifice imposed on the nation by the occupation of the nation by the occupation of the nation.

I still wish to believe that the authorities of the empire have not said their last word, that they will not be unmindful of the undesired sorrows, of the reproaches of the civilized world, of the verdict of history and of the chastisement of God.

Accept, excellency, the expression of my sincere esteem.
(Signed)
D. J. CARDINAL MERCIER, Archbishop of Malines.

Von Bissing, in spite of his promise, did not answer the letter of November 29. He confined himself to informing the cardinal, through Baron von der Lancken, that he could not accept the help offered by the priests in the work of enrolling the unemployed.

Several days later the cardinal sent the parish priests of his diocese the following instructions:
In spite of the protests addressed to Germany by the sovereign pontiff and several neutral states, the deportation of our civil population still continues. It is our duty to lessen to the best of our ability the evil we are powerless to prevent.

The moment that notices to assemble are sent to you, you must, please warn persons who do not depend on public assistance to provide themselves with a receipt for the payment of this year's taxes, duly certified by the communal authorities. If they refuse to do so, they must ask their parish priest for a certificate of illness or for a certificate of unemployment, that they are in employment.

The day following their departure make an appeal to the best of your charitable parishioners, both men and women; get into contact with the St. Vincent de Paul society, with the Ladies of Mercy, the Third Order of St. Francis, the congregations and confraternities, the manifold societies affiliated with the diocesan Federation of Catholic Women, of which the Abbe Hallant is the director, and form with their help and under the direction of the parish priest or his delegate a committee of moral assistance, who will undertake to visit stricken families, to comfort, advise and help them. Give them moral support and help them materially, if need be. A Christian parish forms one family. When in a family one member suffers, all suffer; when it enjoys prosperity, every one shares therein. And so not one single home in the parish should be left out, unknown or forgotten. If it were desirable in normal times, it should be absolutely necessary in these distressing days. Those who have leisure ought to place themselves at the disposal of those who have none. The superfluity of some ought to minister to the wants of others. Mutual help so understood and practiced is but the fulfillment of the law of Christ.

The parish priests who are in need of some help in their ministry of charity, may or may not send some one to me for it, but I should like them to be good enough to fix approximately the amount of help they require. We must leave no stone unturned to effect the repatriation of those who, according to the German government's declarations, are to be immune from deportation. To that end, a committee has been organized in our episcopal curia to deal with cases calling for redress.

WATER SUPPLY PROBLEM
SETTLEMENT OF KLAMATH LANDS MAY BE DELAYED.

Adjustment of Power Company, American Legion and Other Conflicting Interests Held Urgent.

KLAMATH FALLS, Jan. 12.—(Special.)—Settlement of 25,000 acres of Tule lake lands within the next two or three years depends upon regulation of the upper Klamath lake water supply during the summer season, according to H. P. Newell, project engineer.

Unless differences with the California-Oregon Power company and the American Legion and other conflicting interests are reconciled, so that the power company can install the link river dam, which will serve to make a storage reservoir of the upper lake, Mr. Newell asserts that water will not be available to irrigate land already under ditches, about 50,000 acres, in July and August, to say nothing of expansion.

The opening of Tule lake lands to homestead entry is being anxiously awaited. There are 12,000 acres already reclaimed and all that prevents opening to settlement, says Newell, is the lack of irrigation water.

Within two or three years, it is estimated, the waters of Tule lake will have receded so as to leave 25,000 acres available for homesteaders. According to Mr. Newell, however, the summer water supply under present conditions cannot be depended on to irrigate lands already patented, which have been formed into irrigation districts and the problem of conserving the winter flood waters for use in the dry months is one to be faced immediately.

Relic of Old Days Dug Up at Silvertown.
Fragment of Gun That Burst When Cleveland Was Elected Found.

SILVERTOWN, Or., Jan. 12.—(Special.)—In excavating for a garage at the corner of First and Lewis streets a few days ago, Vernon Wolcott unearthed a piece of iron which recalls an incident in early history of considerable interest. It is the butt of a cannon which Silvertown owned many years ago and which frequently was used in celebrating the election of presidents.

In the celebration of Cleveland's first election some of the enthusiastic democrats overjoyed the gun and it burst in fragments, which flew in all directions. One piece of the cannon was hurled 500 feet to R. C. Ramsby's barnyard and killed one of his cows.

The episode created a lot of talk and some hard feelings, and to make peace with his neighbor and show fidelity to his party principles, Jake McClaine, founder of the Coolidge & McClaine bank of Silvertown, paid Mr. Ramsby for the cow.

Both Mr. Ramsby and Mr. McClaine are dead.

The piece of cannon is now on exhibition in the front window of the Coolidge & McClaine bank.

Snow Melts at Spirit Lake.
KELSO, Wash., Jan. 12.—(Special.)—

Returned trappers from the Spirit lake and upper Toutle district report that there is little snow at the lower Cascades, which is almost unprecedented for this time of the year.

During the cold snap of last month the snowfall was light in the foothills. There is no snow at the level of Spirit lake and autos drove to the lake last week.

Why does Butter Nut Bread keep its freshness so long?
"Butter Nut bread does stay fresh longer than ordinary breads do. Because of its fine texture of grain and air tight wrapper, it retains the moisture for a longer period of time."
