

LIQUOR LAW BARS
OLD SINBAD'S RUSE

Ancient "Booze" Giver Would Instantly Be Outlawed,

PROHIBITION VERY REAL

National Dry Amendment Bristles With "Teeth" for Making Life Miserable for Violators.

Sinbad, the sailor, freed himself from the clutches of the Old Man of the Sea by proffering that whiskered and withered ancient the fermented juice of the grape. Were Sinbad to repeat that stratagem in America today instantly he would be "in bad" with the federal authorities for a violation of the national prohibition amendment, which went into active effect at the stroke of midnight.

On and after today, aridity will be the portion of all save those who providently laid in stocks of liquor before the ban and who keep the same in their own homes for their own use—for the national prohibition amendment, sequel to decades of strife for a "dry" nation, has formidable teeth in it wherewith to enforce its mandates.

"We will proceed at once under the authority and instructions of the act," said J. S. Smith, federal prohibition director for Oregon, "and will in all probability make a number of arrests today. The provisions of the law permit the investigation of business places where it is suspected that liquor is being sold without the legal formality of a search warrant."

Prohibition 18th Amendment. Ratified by two-thirds of the states and by a similar vote of congress, the national prohibition amendment, 18th amendment to the constitution, contains stringent provisions regarding the liberties that may be taken with John Barleycorn. For example, it is unlawful today and hereafter:

To carry liquor over any highway or street.

To transport it in any vehicle.

To have it in one's place of business.

To possess cider, grapejuice, etc., that has been permitted to attain more than one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol.

To treat a friend in your place of business with a nip of the forbidden drink, or on the street, or anywhere, save in your own home.

To manufacture, sell, barter or otherwise deal with liquor save under the closely restrictive provisions of the act admitting of its manufacture and use for scientific and medical purposes.

"The burden of proof changes with the new federal law," said Mr. Smith, in explanation of its operation.

"Heretofore we had to prove that a man sold liquor. Now when we find liquor in any place of business the presumption is that it is for sale, and being sold, and the burden of proof shifts to the defendant."

Act Has "Teeth."

"The section of this act defining nuisance is especially stringent with teeth in every paragraph. By the provisions of this section any place of business where liquor is kept can be prosecuted. The act provides that property used in the manufacture or sale of liquor shall be held by the authorities and the owner of the building be jointly liable with the purveyor, unless it can be shown that the owner had no knowledge of the illegal practices."

"Liquor may be kept in private homes, provided it was procured in a legal manner and before this act went into effect, and no steps will be taken against possessors of liquor in such cases unless evidence is received that the home is being used for the sale of liquor. When we have evidence that liquor is being sold or manufactured in any home we will

THE successful farmer raises bigger crops and cuts down costs by investment in labor-saving machinery.

Good prices for the farmers' crops encourage new investment, more production and greater prosperity.

But the success of agriculture depends on the growth of railroads—the modern beasts of burden that haul the crops to the world's markets.

The railroads—like the farms—increase their output and cut down unit costs by the constant investment of new capital.

With fair prices for the work they do, the railroads are able to attract new capital for expanding their facilities.

Rates high enough to yield a fair return will insure railroad growth, and prevent costly traffic congestion which invariably results in poorer service at higher cost.

National wealth can increase only as our railroads grow.

Poor railroad service is dear at any price. No growing country can long pay the price of inadequate transportation facilities.

swear out a search warrant and investigate.

"The act also provides that any person who shall be injured in person or property through the violations of the new law shall have legal recourse for recovery against the manufacturer or purveyor of the liquor, or against the owner of the property where the liquor was sold or made. By this provision the heirs of a man who met death by accident due to drunkenness could recover damages for his death."

Officers Have Seizure Rights. "Federal officers have the right to seize any boat, auto or dwelling used in the transportation, sale or manufacture of liquor, and the owner must put up a bond of double the value of the property pending the trial and settlement of the case."

"All sheriffs, prosecuting attorneys, circuit courts, and the legal machinery of state, city and county, are made integral parts of the enforcement facilities of the prohibition amendment."

"Illustrating the preparations that were made to evade the federal law, when it should come into effect, is the statement of a well-known Italian of this city, who says that his countrymen shipped 109 carloads of wine grapes into Portland last year. The wine product of this amount of grapes would total more than 250,000 gallons—yet we are told that just a little wine has been made for a sick wife."

Penalties for violation of the national prohibition act are, for the first offense, by sale or manufacture, not more than $1000 fine or prison sentence not to exceed six months. For the second offense the penalty is not less than $200 fine nor more than $2000, or imprisonment not less than one month nor more than five years, or both such fine and imprisonment.
