

PAN-GERMANS FEAR DEMAND FOR KAISER

Extradition Would Endanger Whole Caste, Is Belief.

MOVE FOUGHT TO END

Profound Anxiety and Astonishment Caused by Allied Note to Dutch Government.

GENEVA, Jan. 19.—A state of profound anxiety and astonishment reigns in Pan-German circles in Germany over the official demand of the allies for the extradition of the Kaiser from Holland. The German ex-emperor, according to a dispatch from Basel, which is confirmed by Munich advices.

The Pan-Germans had hoped to the end that such a final step which affects the whole caste would not be taken. The dispatch says. They argue that if their ex-chief is extradited, nobody will be safe, because the government's hand will be forced.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 19.—(Havas).—Deep emotion has been caused in Holland by the allied demand for the extradition of former Emperor William of Germany, according to a dispatch. Belief is expressed at the Hague that measures will be taken with a view to inducing him voluntarily to place himself at the disposal of the allies.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Holland was informed in the allied note demanding the extradition of former Emperor William that she "will not fulfill her international duty" if she refuses to associate herself with the entente powers in chastising crimes committed by Germans during the war.

Text of Note Published.

The text of the note sent to the Hague was made public today. It follows:

Paris, Jan. 19.—In notifying by these presents the Netherlands government and queen of the text of the article 237 of the treaty of Versailles, a certified copy of which is annexed, which came into force January 10, the powers have the honor to make known at the same time that they have decided to take no action without delay this article. (Article 237 publicly arraigned William II of Germany for offenses against international morality and the sanctity of treaties and declares the allied and associated powers will address a request to the Netherlands government for his surrender in order that he may be placed on trial).

Official Demand Made.

"Consequently the address to the government of The Netherlands an official demand to deliver into their hands William of Hohenzollern, former emperor of Germany in order that he may be judged.

"Individuals residing in Germany against whom the allied and associated powers have brought charges are to be delivered to them under article 238 of the peace treaty, and the ex-emperor, former emperor of Germany, would have been delivered under the same conditions by the German government.

The Netherlands government is conversant with the incontrovertible reasons which imperiously exact that premeditated violations of international treaties, as well as systematic disregard of the most sacred rules and rights of the nations, and the highest placed personalities, special punishment provided by the peace congress.

Belgium Violation Cited.

"The powers briefly recall, among so many crimes, the cynical violation of the neutrality of Belgium and Luxembourg, the barbarous and pitiless system of hostages, deportation en masse, the carrying off of young girls from the city of Lille, who were torn from their families and delivered defenseless to the worst promiscuity; the systematic devastation of entire regions without military utility, the submarine war without restriction, including inhuman abandonment of victims on the high seas, and innumerable acts against non-combatants committed by German authority in violation of the laws of war.

"Responsibility, at least moral for all these acts reaches up to the supreme head who ordered, exercised, made abusive use of his full powers to infringe, or to allow infringement upon the most sacred regulations of human conscience.

"The powers cannot conceive that the government of The Netherlands can regard with less repugnance than themselves the immense responsibility of the ex-emperor.

Allies Against Arguments.

"Holland would not fulfill her international duty if she refused to associate herself with other nations as far as her means allow in undertaking, or at least not hindering, chastisement of the crimes committed.

"In addressing this demand to the Dutch government, the powers believe it their duty to emphasize its special character. It is their duty to insure the execution of article 237 without allowing themselves to be stopped by arguments because it is not a question of a public accusation with jurisdiction, but a question of themselves, but an act of high international policy imposed by the universal conscience, in which legal

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

Tells How She Did It With a Home-Made Remedy.

Mrs. E. H. Boots, a well-known resident of Buchanan County, Ia., who darkened her gray hair, made the following statement:

"Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy with this simple remedy, which they can mix at home. To half a pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, one small box of Barbo Compound and 4 ounces of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently. It does not color the scalp; is not greasy and does not clog the pores. It will make gray-haired people look 10 to 20 years younger."—Adv.

forms have been provided solely to assure to the accused such guarantees as were never before recognized in public law. The powers are convinced Holland, which has always shown respect for the right and love of justice, having been one of the first to claim a place in the society of nations, will not be willing to cover by her moral authority the violation of principles essential to the solidarity of nations, all of which are equally interested in preventing the return of a similar catastrophe.

WOOD TO BE QUESTIONED

House Committee to Investigate
"Floating Death Trap" Report.

SIMS DANIELS CASE TO BE PROBED SOON

Charges Against Navy to Be Fully Investigated.

GENERAL WOOD EXPLAINS

"Floating Death Trap" Statement Made Clear—New Naval Scandal Now Looms.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Charges of Rear-Admiral Sims that the navy department failed to co-operate with the allies during the war will be investigated by the senate sub-committee before which they were made.

This was decided today by the full naval committee, which also authorized appointment of another sub-committee to determine if there should be an inquiry into charges by J. R. Rathorn, editor of the Providence (R. I.) Journal that with the knowledge of Secretary Daniels "many sea-going vessels were manned by untrained crews would be deathtraps in battle."

Secretary Daniels announced that Admiral Sims would be called on to make good his charges either before the senate or a naval board.

Simultaneously Chairman Butler of the house naval committee, announced that Major-General Leonard Wood would be called to explain statements attributed to him that American naval vessels were "floating death traps."

Wood Explains Statement.

General Wood explained at Portland, Maine, today that what he said was that naval ships manned by untrained crews would be deathtraps in battle.

Inquiry into Admiral Sims' charges will not be started by the sub-committee until its present investigation of naval decorations is completed.

The full committee, which was organized by the senate, today was continued today with Admiral Sims concluding his testimony.

Real-Admiral Mayo, commander of the Atlantic fleet during the war, will be called tomorrow.

The full naval committee took up telegrams sent to Senator Lodge and other members by Mr. Rathorn charging immoral conditions in the navy.

Mr. Rathorn alleged there was a division of the naval intelligence department, created to use naval sea-men to entrap innocent men and that as the result of the "practices" resorted to "the morale of the navy department is being rapidly destroyed."

He added that "the entire blame stands at the door of Mr. Daniels" and that "we have ample evidence in proof of these assertions."

Daniels Defers Comment.

Secretary Daniels declined to comment on Mr. Rathorn's charges until, he said, he was more familiar with the allegations.

Assistant Secretary Roosevelt, said by Mr. Daniels, asserted that a special board of inquiry appointed by the judge-advocate-general of the navy two weeks ago had full authority to investigate methods of naval intelligence officers in securing evidence from persons under suspicion of moral delinquency.

While charges of improper methods of obtaining evidence have been in the news for some time, he said, the department has withheld action until the cases of several officers came to light.

Since the beginning of government control, he said, no programme for the Thursday meeting at Seattle, the deliberations will be in the nature of a general discussion, in which the views of the members will guide largely the official action.

It is not known if the Portland freight committee, of which Frank Daniels is chairman, will meet with the passenger committee.

There is as yet considerable passenger offices in the cities of this territory will be abandoned and the board of the original unit solution of this problem will be one of the features of the meeting.

Admiral's Job in War Was to Get Data, Says Secretary.

NAVY PART IS PRAISED

Public Will See That Department
Handled Task Well When All
Is Over, Chief Asserts.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Unless the senate investigation of Rear-Admiral Sims' charges of failure of the navy department to co-operate fully with the allies during the war is made to the entire satisfaction of the American people, inquiry will be made by a naval board, Secretary Daniels announced today.

He added that "no organization in the history of the world ever did a better job than the American navy."

While refusing to discuss Admiral Sims' letter of criticism of the department, Mr. Daniels indicated the admiral frequently clashed with the department through his insistence that more destroyers be withdrawn from troop convoys to augment the anti-submarine forces in European waters.

Troop Convoys Put First.

"The paramount duty of the American navy," Mr. Daniels declared, "was to protect the passage of American troops to Europe, and the safeguarding of merchant shipping vital as that was recognized to be, necessarily was secondary."

Secretary Daniels emphasized that, contrary to a popular impression, Admiral Sims throughout the war was subordinate to Admiral Mayo, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet. He indicated that on the question of the distribution of destroyer strength as well as on other questions, Admiral Sims was overruled by Admiral Mayo as well as the department.

Speakers at today's document bearing on the navy's war activities, Mr. Daniels continued, "is open to the right of the navy, and the navy, the entire record is laid before the people of this country the greater the pride they can have in the achievement of their navy."

The country will be entirely reassured when matters are brought to a showdown.

Secretary Daniels said that in the first summer of the war Admiral Sims was sent to Europe as commander of the United States naval forces in European waters but that in the latter of fact "his duties were not arduous."

"The business of Rear Admiral Sims was to obey orders," declared the secretary. "His duties were to make recommendations, give us all the information and all the facts and then carry out instructions from the department."

The country and the world know already that the job the navy was very well done. Whether on the 27th of June or the 27th of July, or some particular date we should or should not have sent so many destroyers to a certain place or whether they could be made ready at that time, or whether it was important to retain some to protect our coasts, were, of course, matters of naval strategy.

There was no difference of opinion between naval officers as to these matters, but there is something about this big job the navy did, that I am not only willing but glad and happy for all the people in America to know about.

"There wasn't a minute during the war when we did not do everything we possibly could to increase naval effort and add naval craft to fight submarines and protect our troops. We ordered 250 destroyers and there wasn't a minute during the war that work was not pressed to the full capacity of the country. We wanted every ship in America that was fit for use in the navy, and we got it."

"Every private yard, everything was pressed almost to the breaking point to hasten things."

"Rear Admiral Sims must be required to establish every criticism he has made of the department."

"I have been secretary of the navy now nearly seven years and I have never had any trouble at all since I have been here, but sometimes some of our officers will say that I am not only willing but glad and happy for all the people in America to know about."

"The naval administration has been efficient."
