SMALLPOX IN 2 SCHOOLS

WASHINGTON HIGH, FUMIGATED, TO REOPEN TODAY.

Multnomah to Go Through Same Process—Dr. Parrish Says Disease Is Checked.

Discovery of one case of smallpox in Washington high school yesterday resulted in the closing of the school for one day, during which time all rooms were fumigated by officials of the health bureau. The school will re-open this morning.

The new vaccination ruling, under which the city health authorities require all contacts to the disease to submit to vaccination, is credited by City Health Officer Parrish for the success in combating the disease.

County officials yesterday closed the Multnomah school at Multnomah station because of the presence of scarlet fever. This school will be re-opened as soon as it has been fumigated.

The spread of smallpox has been checked, according to City Health Officer Parrish. At the present time 251 cases of the disease are reported to the health bureau. About 30 of these cases are confined in the contagious hospital at Kelly Butte, and the remainder are in private homes.
