PORTLAND RAINFALL TOPS 3-INCH MARK

WILLAMETTE IS RISING

Precipitation Is Recorded in Prac tically All Weather Bureau Stations of State

Portland's heaviest rainfall in 24-hour period since November 5, 1963, was recorded at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, when the gauge showed 3.06 Inches. Continuous showers throughout the day were responsible for slides along many of the heaviest traveled roads in the county and, ould the downpour continue, many of these may be made impassable.

No hope for a cessation of the downpour today was held out by District Porecaster Wells, who mentioned, however, a slight possibility that the rain would turn to snow, as is the case

Special hourly river readings were taken vesterday from points along the upper Willamette in order to give warning of flood danger. Water was warning of flood danger. Water was found highest at Salem and Jefferson, the latter on the Santiam, both points registering 13.4 feet. At Portland it it was 9.4, but Mr. Weils says it will continue to rise today until it reaches about 12 feet, remaining nearly stationary at that point until Wednesday and falling thereafter. While the Williamette is coming up rapidly, it is not expected to cause any damage.

Trains were delayed several hours on Oregon lines, but no serious tierpo occurred from sides. The worst washout was five miles this side of Hood River. This and other slight breaks, such as usually occur along the Columbia gorge, were remedied in a few hours.

Aute Traffic Deteured.

Roadmaster W. A. Eatchel went out yesterday to inspect a gap reported to have been torn in the Sandy boulevard at a point near the Cedars. Water burst from a cuivert and workmen were kept busy Sunday night putting up barricades to check it. Auto traffic on the highway was forced to detour by way of Troutable and the Twelve-Mile house.

Backwater from the culvert flooded the basement and one of the bungalows at the Cedars and prevented operation of the heating plant at the women's detention home.

Mr. Eatchel found that a strip of pavement about 40 feet in length, where a rock and dirt fill had formed the foundation had such bateagen found.
