In the election of 1918 not only were seven members of the house only were seven members of the house out of eight elected republicans, but Cappr was elected United States senator and Allen governor by big majorities. Then the criticism of the Wilson administration's conduct of the war has got further in Kansas than in most states. The man who in testifying before the senate house committee attacked the "unnecessary sacrifice of troops" was Heny J. Allen, whose word carries a lot of weight here.

len, whose weight here. Another influence, without refer-ence to which no discussion of the Kansas situation would be complete is the Kansas City Star, which covers the eastern end of the state like a blanket. The Star is making the fight of its life for Leonard Wood, which is another of the elements tending to make it easy for the general in this state. The Star has been attacking the Wilson administration right down the line, and has been particularly hostile to the peace treaty.

So if President Wilson manages to force the democrats to make the peace treaty the paramount issue, the democrats will find a considerable element in this state unfriendly.

Herbert C. Hoover has many admirers in the towns, but it is declared that the wheat farmers, who bulk large in the state's electorate, are what might be called the original Wood state. The general is as sure of getting 20 votes of her delegation at the republican national convention as anything an politics reasonably can be. It was right in Kansas, at Camp Function, that Wood trained the boys were killed in this state in the bitterness which impediately preceded the Kunsas, Nebraska and Missouri, ness which immediately preceded the of Kunsas, Nebraska and Missouri. It would be almost like opposing a "lawand-order" candidate.

The really interesting thing about the she prefers, but how she is going in the November election. Republicans will never forget the terrible jolt the gave them in 1916, piling up a tremendous majority for Wilson at the same time she was electing Arthur Capper governor by a recoro majority.

From every discernable sign Kansas is not going to repeat that performance. There is resentment still rankling over what the farmers out here regard as the deception practived he may be a presidential candidate.

May Dolling sat in the empty school room struggling with the monthly report. The averages seemed to be worse each month.

"Why this overtime?" Ann Craves, who taught the same grade, asked.

"I am doing reports." May replied.

"They are terrible, but I don't think it's altogether my fault. I can't help being sick and substitute teachers simply can't get the work out of a class."

"That is true." Ann said as she came in. "But I don't see why you are sick so much."

"Neither do I, but I have one cold after another," May complained.

"Well, I had the same trouble until I found a remedy," Ann told her, "With a little care you can keep a cold from getting a start. I found that Weeks' Break-Up-A-Cold Tablets not only rid you of one cold, but they prevent others."

"Oh, I have no faith in cold tablets." May asserted. "They always make one feel dull and dopey."

"Nonsense," Ann reforted fartly, "It's plain you have never tried Weeks' Break-Up-A-Cold Tablets. They are different. They stimulate your cold-fighting strength and you fight off a cold naturally. That's what our druggist told me. He recommended them."

"Well, if that is true I certainly must get a box," May said with interest. "Where can you buy them?"

"At any druggist's for twenty-five cents." Ann replied. "Insist on Weeks', though, because they contain a vegetable laxative instead of calomel. At the very first sign of a sneere start taking them. I'll warrant you won't be out another day with a cold."
