

DEMOCRATS SEEK MAN FOR SENATOR

Harvey G. Starkweather Held to Be One Best Bet.

MYERS NOT VOTE-GETTER

Chamberlain Enemies Claim to Have Ammunition Enough to Keep Up Bombardment.

Harvey G. Starkweather may oppose George E. Chamberlain for the democratic nomination for United States senator in the May primaries.

As yet there is no definite plan of campaign mapped out to eliminate Senator Chamberlain by his political enemies within his own party.

This sort of ammunition has been accumulating for some time and the anti-Chamberlain group figures that there is enough in cold storage to keep up a steady bombardment from now until November, if necessary.

Some of the anti-Chamberlain democrats think that the object of their attack cannot be defeated in the primaries, so that the thing for them to do is to keep whacking away and aid his republican opponent, who at this stage of the game is Robert N. Stanford.

Myers Not Good Vote-Getter.

Some consideration has been given as to available material for the primary fight. Frank S. Myers, deposed postmaster, one of the leaders of the anti-Chamberlain campaign, has been set aside as a vote-drawing machine.

In the connection with the suggestion that Mr. Starkweather be put into the primaries, it is reported that Mrs. Alexander Thompson will take the stump against Senator Chamberlain.

Myers Cause of Open Warfare.

Open warfare against the senator came to a head following the removal of F. S. Myers as postmaster. It started with state chairman Starkweather telegraphing to Washington asking that a hearing be given Mr. Myers.

DEMOCRATS ENTER RACE

T. H. Crawford, Nolan Skiff, Will M. Peterson Would Be Secretary.

SALEM, Or., Feb. 23.—(Special).—Three democrats, all bent on attending the national convention of the party to be held at San Francisco in June, have filed their formal declarations of candidacy with the secretary here.

T. H. Crawford, La Grande attorney, would represent the state at large, according to his declaration.

Mr. Crawford says he favors ratification of the peace treaty without amendments, but with such clarifying reservations as will announce to the world that there can be no interference of the constitution or the Monroe doctrine.

Mr. Crawford asks that the following be printed after his name on the ballot: "League of Nations—The Peace of the World."

Nolan Skiff, also of La Grande, would represent the 24 congressional district at the convention.

Mr. Skiff declares in his declaration that he believes in the treaty of peace and league of nations covenant, and would support for president and vice-president those men who have demonstrated their ability to successfully handle the many industrial problems now confronting the nation.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Jack Pickford as "Chad," the little mountaineer hero of John Fox Jr., "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," which is showing at the Rivoli theater this week.

TODAY'S FILM FEATURES: Majestic—Hope Hampton, "A Modern Salome." People's—Eugene O'Brien, "Sealed Hearts." Columbia—Marguerite Clark, "All of a Sudden Peggy." Liberty—Norma Thain, "A Daughter of Two Worlds." Rivoli—Jack Pickford, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come." Star—Special production, "Be-ware of Strangers." Sunset—Foudlin, "The Grim Game." Circle—Marguerite Clark, "Miss George Washington."

ROMANCE of the scintillating chivalrous and clean type—a far cry from the love stories interwoven with plots of social unrest, criminal undertakings and shadowy life such as some modern photoplays depict—constitutes much of the charm of this week's attraction at the Rivoli theater.

The story, which is known to the vast number of motion-picture fans is of a sturdy little American left homestead who has no friends except those made by his honesty and kindness. The home life of the Turners, living in the Virginia mountains where a rigorous rule of fair play is enforced, is opened to him.

Here he meets Melissa, a girl of his own age who has been taken in by the Turner's even as Chad has. Later he goes down into the blue grass country of Kentucky where he meets Margaret Dean, daughter of General Dean, one of the most respected of all southern gentlemen.

How Chad gradually wins a place for himself in the blue grass life and how Melissa and Margaret vie for his love is the story of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come."

Seven thousand miles of film are handled yearly in the Goldwyn laboratories at the Culver city studio—if placed end to end would reach from the studio in California to the head office in New York City, and back again.

The Second Tooth May Go More Quickly Than the First

When a person has teeth with unmistakably hard enamel, it naturally takes an exceptionally long time for "Acid-Mouth" to destroy them. But when one tooth decays, it stands to reason that the enamel everywhere in the mouth must be weakening, too, and so the other teeth seem to go more quickly than the first.
