One car, the Stanley, is not propelled by gasoline at all, but by steam. Many changes in outward appearance great the show visitor, even among the cars of standard make, long known here. For example, the new Mitchell appears for the first time with a tilted radiator. The Mitchell never has been known as a car of extreme styles, and its engi-Mitchell never has been known as a car of extreme styles, and its engineers declare that this tilted radiator type is going to become standard before long on all cars. One reason they urge therefore is that this tilt greatly reduces wind resistance.

Much interest attaches to the new anch interest attaches to the new ears at the show, of which there are many. One of the new models which just about everybody who attends the show asks about is the new Willys-Knight, which has been expected here for months but arrived only in time for the show. But a complete line of these cars is presented, including five-passenger, readster, coupe and sedsn. The Willys-Knight is vastly changed in appearance from the old model, though not at all like its small brother the Overland four, which features the Overland four which features the Overland features the O brother, the Overland four, which features the new triplex spring suspen-sion. The Willys-Knight is one of the two cars at the show with the Knight sleeve-valve motor, the Stearns-Knight being the other.

Shaw Another New Car.

Another new car is the Shaw, which has a most strikingly different radiator front view. It is in the high-priced class, being one of the speed cars with the Deusenberg motor.

The new Briscoe, another new model much discussed in advance, hadn't arrived from the factory in time to be displayed at the show yesterday, but it will be there later in the week. The Monroe, another four-cylinder car new to this territory, also had not been placed in the show, though it, too, will be seen later.

Show Has Load of Interest.

There is so much to see at the Portland automobile show that one might write many columns about it and still tell only a part, just as the visitor can put in hours in the Ice Palace and still not see all there is to see the show is made especially attractive by the beautiful decorating scheme These decorations, which include a sky-blue canopy of filmy material, horison scenes from Portland's beautiful residence districts and the Columbia river highway, along the sides and posts and signs at the various booths in natural birch bark, are a delight to the eye and a work of art.

Henor of selling the first car at the show, a much-coveted distinction, was officially awarded by M. O. Wilking, show manager, to H. A. Howard, salesman for the C. H. These are about as many different types of motive equipment, more or less, as there are cars. Beginning with the four-cylinder Ford and Chevrolet, the list includes many other four-cylinder cars, a host of sizes, quite a lot of eights and one 12-cylinder automobile, the Packard twin-six. The sixes are considerably in the plurality, though there are a lot of fours, including some of the higher-priced cars like the Stutz and the new Revere and Shaw, each of the latter of which has the Deusenberg racing type motor.

Even to say that a car has a four, a six, an eight or a 12-cylinder motor tells only a part of the story, for there are cars with L-head motors and others that employ the valve-inhead principle, of which the Buick is an example. Some which gain the effect of more cylinders by increasing the number of valves, such as the Stutz and Pierce-Arrow, one a four, biblition at the armory;
