It is spread over the producing end of the lumber industry on the coast; why not over the producing end of the wheat industry? If it were thus spread, we should hear loud cries from the railroads against being compelled to haul 100 or 200 additional miles without additional compensation.

STATISTICS AS TO VACCINATION.

ROSEBURG, Ore., Feb. 22.—(To the Editor.)—Permit me to call attention to an editorial in the Oregonian, February 2, regarding "One Oregon Epidemic," in which the article favors vaccination as a preventive for smallpox. In summing up the situation of the epidemic of 20 years ago, the article gives a section of the report of the board of health bulletin—then given to say "The vaccination had effectively insured against death from smallpox and two vaccinations confer immunity."
