SITUATIONS WANTED-MALE

"Where All Things Are Equap" EMPLOY AN EN-SERVICE MAN.
Phone write or call upon Captain Conville
AT LIBERTY TEMPLE
Main 313.
While the number of ex-soldiers and sailors out of employment is greater than it was a week ago, there are encouraging signs that the problem is going to be successfully solved in due time.
Principal among these signs is the changed attitude apparent among both employers and men.
The men are indicating a growing disposition to take the prospects for their future more into consideration in seekting a connection, and are willing, as a rule, to start in at a reasonable wage, provided there is a chance for permanent employment and to get ahead.
Employers in considerable numbers have begun to stop and think over this question of "unemployed ex-service men," with the result that they are trying to figure out something constructive in the way of helping to absorb these patricts. The percentage of letters in Captain Conville's daily mail, from employers who go into details about what they would like to do and are able to do is increasing steadily. And in nearly every case something of a constructive favorable nature is arranged between the employer thus concerned and the one or more men for whom he has been able to provide a place.

The employer generally has also de-employer thus concerned and the one or more men for whom he has been able to provide a place.

The employer generally has also developed a new and correct viewpoint with respect to the character and disposition of the men, and a better understanding is resulting.

As indicated above, the slogan of this campaign, which slogan is heartily indicated above, the slogan of this campaign, which slogan is heartily indicated above, the slogan of this campaign, which slogan is heartily indicated above, the slogan of this campaign, which slogan is heartily indicated above, the slogan of this campaign, which slogan is heartily indicated to a strength where everything is equal. The men want it distinctly understood that it is not charity nor unmerited favors that they want, but simply that they be given preference over the other fellow whose circumstances are similar and who is no better qualified.

Captain Conville is anxious that employers generally write him in confidence about what they have in mind with respect to these men, and gives assurance that every detail of such communications will have his personal attention and best efforts in consummating mutually satisfactory arrangements.

If this reaches the eye of an employer who has not taken the matter up for special consideration, no time should be lost by any such employer in taking action by letter or a cell upon Captain Conville.
