

ACTING TRAINING BILL IS POSTPONED

Measure to Wait Till Next Session of Congress.

LEADERS IN AGREEMENT

Universal Military Training Not Side-Tracked, Says Chairman of House Committee.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Universal military training will be omitted from the house army reorganization bill and be the subject of separate legislation at the next session of congress, beginning in December. This was agreed upon tonight by republican leaders and Chairman Kahn of the house committee on military affairs.

The agreement is looked upon as eliminating any possibility of further action in the house which might be interpreted as a stand on universal training in the coming presidential campaign and will leave the party's attitude a possible subject for consideration in framing the platform at the national convention in June.

Under the agreement, Chairman Kahn will sponsor a special subcommittee friendly to universal training to draft the training bill. The measure, however, will not be presented until after thoroughly investigating the cost, economic and industrial effects of calling thousands of youths away from productive activities and the hundreds of thousands of dollars involved in the bill as separate legislation will be assured prompt house consideration, and not be subjected to slow death by remaining on the calendar.

Final approval of the agreement is to be given to the subcommittee by the military committee, which recently adopted universal military training as its principle as a part of the future military policy of the country. This approval, however, is regarded as only perfunctory.

"Universal military training will not be and has not been sidetracked," declared Mr. Kahn tonight. "Under the agreement with the house leaders in view of the attitude of our members, I think that separate legislation is the only practical course."

The recent action of the democratic caucus opposing universal training, and the open opposition of many republicans, particularly those of the middle western agricultural states, had made prompt house consideration of legislation extremely unlikely prior to reaching an agreement tonight.

"As far as the army reorganization bill is concerned, the military committee tonight completed work on it by deciding to give relative rank to army nurses. Grades for nurses would range from second lieutenant to major, but they would receive less pay than army officers of corresponding grades.

GUARD'S KISS IS SEEN

Angel, who was a domestic at the Hawley home, said that Willard was good to his wife.

Mrs. Hawley Called Pauline. Mrs. Hawley changed her clothes four or five times a day, said the witness, "and every time I would go into the room, the clothes would be at the head of her bed and every morning she would have me open the door for the dog and cat and they would get in bed with her."

"One day she asked me to go to Larson's store after some bananas, and I came back and went in the kitchen and saw that she had been through the back door. She told me that slaves were supposed to come in the back way and I quit. She always refused to speak to me on the street, though Mr. Hawley always did, and every morning I had to clean up the kitchen after the dog and cat had slept in the kitchen."

"You do not feel kindly toward Mrs. Hawley," observed Mr. Schuebel. "I do not know how I could, after the way she treated me," returned the witness, who said her mistress wrote her a 10-page letter each time on what to do and how to do it.

Mrs. Nona Ferguson, who was the domestic of the Hawleys after they moved into the little house on Main street, said that Mrs. Hawley would always find fault with everything.

Plaintiff's Habits Related. "I was treated very nicely by Mr. Hawley," said the witness, "but Mrs. Hawley did not treat me well at all. She lay in bed until 11 o'clock most every morning and would sometimes have breakfast in bed. She left her clothes on the floor and I would have to pick them up."

"You do like Mrs. Hawley personally," questioned Schuebel. "I should say I don't," answered the witness.

Mr. Schuebel attempted to read to Mrs. McConnell a letter from Willard to his wife, in which he wrote, "I am glad you let Lida go. You did just right. She was no good and too sloppy, anyway." The letter had already been introduced in evidence and the court held the testimony was not competent under cross-examination.

Mrs. Fred Gadke, who made all of Marjorie's clothes except those she bought in the stores, said she had four dresses for the plaintiff when the suit was filed.

"One had been there so long she had forgotten about it," said Mrs. Gadke. "There was never a time she did not have one or two silk dresses being made."

Mrs. W. S. Bennett said she had been to the Hawley house frequently and that Marjorie's attitude had been so affectionate toward his wife that the witness had remarked about it. She said she noticed that Marjorie neglected her baby.

"She said she would like to see Willard get drunk and smoke and chew, and then she would call him a man," said Mrs. Bennett.

Dismissal Motion Is Lost. Judge Bagley this afternoon overruled another motion of the defense to dismiss the case, the same cause being presented as formerly that Marjorie had charged the defendant with degeneracy and that a divorce could be granted on the testimony of an accomplice.

When W. P. Hawley Sr. resumed his testimony under cross-examination, he was asked by the original counsel if he had done all he could honorably could to bring about a reconciliation of the young people before the papers were filed.

MEETING IS LIVE ONE

Fire of Questions and Criticisms Comes Faster Than Chairman Can Handle Them.

Arguments against raising the cost of street car rides were forgotten in an instant yesterday at the meeting of the housewives' council in the central library, when Mrs. E. B. Colwell, secretary of the motion picture censorship board took the floor. Although Mrs. Colwell occupied about one-third of the time taken up by E. M. Cousin to discuss the street car company's practices, she had half the gathering on their feet firing questions and criticisms faster than the chairman could handle them.

The sheriff of Wallowa county will leave for Washington this week to obtain the necessary legal papers before continuing his journey to Alberta after the prisoner.

INITIATION OF PROHIBITIVE LAW IS PROPOSED.

Self-Styled Public School Protective League Also Holds Election of Officers.

Anti-vaccination forces, styling themselves the Public School Protective League, took definite steps to organize and arrange financial support for the league at a meeting held in the assembly room of the Multnomah hotel last night. Voluntary subscriptions were taken and talks were made by several active advocates of the league.

The most important action of the meeting was the adoption of a resolution to circulate an initiative petition for a measure to be passed on by the people at the regular election in the fall. The measure is similar to that recently adopted for the circulation of petitions in the state of California and would provide that "no form of compulsory vaccination or other medication shall hereafter be made a condition precedent in this state for admission to or attendance at any public school, college, university or other educational institution, or for the employment of any person in any public office or for the exercise of any public duty or for the enjoyment of any privilege of this section be controlled or limited by any other provision of this constitution."

Among the speakers, Julius V. Ohmart and Mrs. Helen Gray Drolinger spoke at some length on the subject of compulsory vaccination from nearly all angles. Mr. Ohmart, discussing the Oregon statutes, asserted that the board of health in reality is a board of censors and that the doctors are seeking, through these regulations, to usurp legislative power. He said that the board is and urged the need for legislation in any attempt to control the situation. He denounced all legal authority for compulsory medical examination or inspection in the public schools.

The league has elected the following officers: W. H. Malloy, city manager of the Pacific States Fire insurance company, president; C. L. McKenna, state secretary of the United Artisans, secretary; and Miss Josephine Fritz, treasurer. The league has been established at 323 Chamber of Commerce building.

DIVORCE COMPLAINT ALLEGES HOME IS MADE HELL.

"Only Time I Get Out at Night Is When She Has Date," Declares R. P. Nelson.

That Mary Ella Nelson, worth at least $100,000 in her own name, "has broken about every marriage tie or infidelity that would make a man instead of a heaven a place to be shunned rather than a spot where he can seek rest and comfort, and the accusations of Raymond P. Nelson, her husband, who has neither property nor money and whose income is about $100 a month, in a divorce suit filed in the circuit court here today.

"The only time I get out at night is when she has a date with some one," declares the husband, who goes on to say that she has been in the name only, that her conduct has been "outrageous," that she is slovenly, quarrelsome and unfaithful.

"I have been a true, faithful and loving husband to no purpose, as she is so thoroughly had it is impossible to reform her by any means," declared Nelson.

The Nelsons were married in Portland December 24, 1912. Nelson declared that his wife's property is worth at least $100,000, consisting of 700 acres of farm land and haywards, stock and farm property. He has turned over his entire income, amounting to about $7000 since marriage, but has received little back for spending purposes, he complains.

Alvin D. Stewart, who shared his taste in automobiles while refusing to give his wife proper clothes and denying her the pleasure of riding in the city, has purchased a new car, Ethel M. Stewart in a divorce action filed.

Other divorce suits filed yesterday were Clara against Frank W. Wangling, Christie E. against Clyde J. Tutbill, Jeanette A. against W. P. Tyner, Helen May against Edwin C. Blackburn, and Ethel M. Stewart against Margaret against Jefferson D. German.

Oregon Growers' Association Will Build at Roseburg.

ROSEBURG, Or., Feb. 24.—(Special.)—That the Oregon Growers' association will build a prune packing and processing plant here, was the structure to start immediately, was the statement made by J. O. Holt of Eugene, manager of the association, who with his family arrived here last night on a morning train.

The big session since organization of the federation last June was the endorsement of a movement to raise $250,000 for the support of a private home in which girls discharged from the Cedars might be sheltered until they secured permanent locations.

HOOD RIVER, Or., Feb. 24.—(Special.)—Officials of the Kibbe Construction company, engaged in paving the Columbia river highway between here and Wyeth, announced today that laying "hot stuff" would be resumed next Monday, when the road required to be closed during the week from T. CITY'S FUTURE, ASSERTION

City Attorney Tells Builders of Benefits to Come.

TERMINAL RECORD LAUDED

Public Building Leads Way For Private Enterprise, Its Attitude of Speakers.

Some idea of the immense benefits which will accrue to the city with the proper development of the port facilities was given to the members of the Portland association of building owners by the speaker, W. P. Roche, city attorney, who addressed the annual banquet of the association at the Benson hotel last night. The speaker told of the gigantic port programme which is being urged by City Engineer Laugaard, and asserted it would insure the city's future as the leading port of the Pacific coast.

"Until the construction of the St. John's terminal there was no modern and efficient dock or wharf structure on the coast to meet the requirements of our present-day overseas commerce," he said. "The value of this terminal to the port in export and import business is incalculable. This type of business requires rails at the ship's side. We had no wharves so constructed and this is one of the leading ports of the Pacific coast, which this port was diverted to neighboring ports."

Terminal Changes Status. "With the opening of the St. John's terminal, Portland was on an absolute parity with the best equipped ports of the world for the rapid and economical handling of freight and records for handling rubber and molasses were made at this terminal in the developing days of 1912. This week two ocean steamers will be unloading at the same time at the terminal.

"When the dock commission began active work, the terminal was a discouraging and private owners would not invest in new structures because they promised very low rates on capital invested, if any, with an uncertain hazard.

Public Enterprise Leads Way. "The public is, of course, justified in providing essential port facilities when conditions prevent the investment of private funds. It is also true that certain undertakings must be borne by the public which are of general public benefit and of a kind in which private enterprise and individuals have no particular interest. Such is the Laugaard plan for the Willamette river, the widening of Glean streets and from Front street to the river.

"When, however, these public improvements are well planned and executed, the time comes when the investment of private funds may again be employed in the construction of the terminal. The public interest is not to close this field to private initiative, but to aid in the development of the port business by providing essential port needs so that attractive returns on money invested in water terminal facilities will induce private owners to use their water front properties in this business.

Merchant Marine Important. "The development of our merchant marine will be an important factor in the national government's program to acquire ownership and control of the vessels of the United States. It is also true that the leasing and purchasing of property by these interests for water terminal uses.

"Portland is now sensing the new and vast fields of commerce into which she is certain to go with ever-increasing strength and faith, and the public interest will lead her to build and vacate and vacant and unused shore properties will come into such use as will benefit the true sense of the word, the developments along the shores of the Willamette from the heart of the city to the confluence of that river with the Columbia will amaze most of us."

Architect Talks Costs. Harrison A. Whitney, architect, gave a talk on construction costs and maintenance of buildings. He told the building owners they could not expect an appreciable reduction in costs of materials for years to come. He gave a comprehensive outline of computing office building costs by the square foot of space in order that owners and managers might have accurate knowledge of what returns they are making on their investments.

N. J. Upham, a real estate dealer of Duluth, Minn., spoke briefly on construction costs and office building management in his city and other parts of the east and middle west.

President Vincent and Secretary Sawyer submitted their annual reports, but the annual election of officers was deferred until next Monday noon.
