

PROMINENT MEDICAL MAN PASSES AWAY

Dr. K. A. J. Mackenzie Dies at Home in Portland.

PHYSICIAN LONG LEADER

Doctor for 20 Years Member of Faculty of University School and Dean for Period.

Dr. Kenneth A. J. Mackenzie, dean of the medical department of the University of Oregon and for many years one of the most prominent and active members of the medical profession in Portland, passed away last evening at his home at the family residence, 145 Twentieth street north. Heart disease was given as the immediate cause of death, although Dr. Mackenzie had recovered from an attack of influenza which confined him to his room for two weeks.

Last fall while attending a convention of physicians at Spokane, Dr. Mackenzie became ill and after his return home was confined at his home for several weeks, later spending a portion of the winter in California in an attempt to regain his health. He never fully recovered, however, and the attack of influenza further sapped his strength. He was up and around following this last illness for the first time Sunday, but became worse last evening and the end soon followed.

Dr. Mackenzie was long a practicing physician in this city, coming here in 1887 and during that long period took an active part in the medical development of the city and the medical department of the university. He was developing a large private practice. During the past several years he was particularly interested in the development of the university medical center and it was largely through his influence that the handsome new quarters of the university medical school were built and opened on the heights above Terwilliger boulevard last fall, and plans drawn for the erection of a new county hospital in the same immediate vicinity.

Medical Center Planned. It was Dr. Mackenzie's ambition to live until a great medical center had been erected here, to have plans for hospitals and medical buildings, a portion of the money for which had already been offered, were being evolved under his plan. The county hospital, in the planning of which he took no small part, will be erected this summer, according to present plans.

Dr. Mackenzie was born in Cumberland house, Manitoba, Jan. 13, 1855. As a boy he attended an academy in Scotland, later the high school at Montreal, Canada, and subsequently graduated from upper Canada college, Toronto. He received his medical education at the university, graduating in 1881, and shortly afterwards went to Edinburgh, where he took post-graduate work in the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons.

In 1882 Dr. Mackenzie, upon his return to America, settled in Portland, where he lived almost continuously ever since. In 1883 he was appointed a member of the staff of St. Vincent's hospital, and shortly afterward became a member of the medical staff of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company, later becoming chief surgeon for the road here.

Physician Takes Lead. For 20 years Dr. Mackenzie served on the faculty of the medical department of the University of Oregon, finally accepting the position of dean of the medical school in this latter capacity taking the leadership in the recent rapid development of that institution. During his long period of medical service in Portland the physician took an active part among the members of the medical profession and served in the capacities both of president of the Oregon State Medical association and of the Portland Medical society. He was also identified with the American Medical association and with the International Association of Railway Surgeons. He was a member of the Arlington club and the University club and was a life member of the Portland Library association.

Dr. Mackenzie is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Frederick Macleay and Miss Jean Mackenzie, and two sons, Kenneth A. J. Mackenzie Jr., who is now a student at the University of California, and Ronald Mackenzie, engaged in the lumber business at Hoquiam.

Surgery Physician's Forte. While Dr. Mackenzie took an active lead in matters pertaining to the medical profession, in his realm of surgery he was recognized throughout the United States. During his years of practice in Portland he performed delicate operations almost without number and contributed much to the development of the art of surgery.

His development of nerve grafting is particularly cited by brother physicians as a great work. About ten years ago Dr. Mackenzie performed the first notable operation of this kind, splicing and joining a severed sciatic nerve and demonstrating that nerves could be pieced together and made to function again. His work in this field attracted attention throughout the country and was carrying to greater development during the war. He also was a leader in operations for intestinal fistula and for ulcers of the stomach. He was known as a surgeon of extreme delicacy of touch and performed a considerable number of operations on the brain which brought the attention of medical men all over the country.

War Service Rendered. During the war Dr. Mackenzie, although well along in years, took an active part. He received a commission as captain in the medical corps and had charge of the recruiting of physicians for medical work in the army. Nine years ago, when I was superintendent of the medical school and also supervised home medical service.

Physicians generally were shocked at the news of Dr. Mackenzie's death last night and declared his passing a great loss not only to the medical profession and to the medical school, but to the community at large. Dr. Mackenzie was a man of broad and varied interests. He was a man of profound knowledge, of good intention, of suffering humanity, and with a great breadth of vision for the present and future needs of the medical profession. The new medical school and assembly of hospitals which he had planned will stand forever as a monument to his wisdom and foresight.

Mayor Baker Pays Tribute. "His passing is a loss to the community," said Mayor Baker. "He was one of the greatest medical men of our time. His passing is a loss to the community, and his death is a great shock." "Time will be necessary to adequately estimate the value of his life, as a physician and as a citizen. He has occupied a position of first rank. His going is a serious loss, particularly so at this disturbed time. His profession and the community will mourn an honored leader and a valued friend."

"I am simply overcome," said Dr. A. E. Mackay, president of the city and county medical society. "I had expected to attend a meeting of the medical school faculty at Dr. Mackenzie's house called for Tuesday evening. His passing is a loss to the city and the medical profession. He was a man of tremendous energy, of splendid physique, and I doubt not that his recent ill health and death were due in no small measure to the strain he has undergone in guiding the development of the medical school. He can truthfully be said that he gave his life to the development of the medical school and the advancement of the medical profession in the northwest."

GRAND JURY HEARS HOFF PROBE ADVICE

Liability for Funds of Office Explained.

BOOK AUDIT GOES ON

Data Will Not Be Ready for Presentation to Investigators for Some Time.

SALEM, Or., March 15.—(Special.)—Any person, whether he be acting as a state agent or in a private capacity, who wrongfully assumes dominion or control of public funds and converts the same to his own use or with injury to the state, even though there is no criminal intent, is liable for conversion, in the scope of a decision in the Oregon supreme court based on a state statute, according to Judge Percy H. Kelly, who today instructed the grand jury selected in the Marion county circuit court to probe into the official affairs of O. P. Hoff, state treasurer.

Six Reside in Salem. Six of the seven members of the grand jury are residents of Salem, and answered the grand jury named upon being called by the court: Gideon Stolz, foreman, manufacturer, Salem; W. E. Way, farmer, Salem; R. Hunter, clerk, Salem; E. E. Gilliam, Liverman, Salem; S. L. Frazier, clerk, Salem; William McChesney, Salem; and John F. Manning, farmer, West Salem. Anthony Grogan, who was among those drawn on the grand jury, was excused by Judge Kelly because of defective hearing.

Legal Advice to Be Given. "As a result of the governor's instructions," said Judge Kelly, "the attorney-general and his lawful appointed assistants will act as your legal advisers during this investigation. I have been intimately acquainted with these officials for many years and they are skilled in their profession and will give you the benefit of their knowledge."

Because of the wide publicity given the charges framed against the person under investigation, Judge Kelly said it was his duty to outline briefly the law of the state as it applied to the conversion of public funds, together with the construction placed on the statute by the supreme court.

Criminal Intent Not Material. To this end Judge Kelly said that any person who wrongfully assumed dominion or control over public funds, loaned the same without financial record to the state or converted it to his own use would be guilty of larceny. Construction of the statute by the supreme court, Judge Kelly said, implied that the person charged with the criminal intent of the person charged was not material. Neither would it be necessary to prove the person committing the crime benefited by the use of the money, according to Judge Kelly.

Attorney-General Brown Present. Attorney-General Brown was present in the courtroom during the drawing of the jury and the subsequent proceedings. He later declared himself satisfied with the seven men chosen to conduct the investigation. He was employed by the state to audit the books and records of the treasurer's department and said to be making rapid progress, and that the attorney-general had been informed of the progress of the investigation.

NEWBERRY RULING MADE

Court Interrupts Counsel and Indicates Charge to Jury. GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., March 15.—A ruling on the status of Truman H. Newberry in the election trial was injected into arguments to the jury today by Judge C. W. Sessions. An interpretation of the election statutes by George E. Nichols of defense counsel, drew a whispered objection from Frank C. Dalley, assistant attorney-general, and the court interrupted Mr. Nichols. "I shall charge the jury," he said, "that if Senator Newberry participated actively in the things which caused the expenditure of money, then he caused it to be expended."

Both government and defense arguments were heard today. W. H. Eichhorn for three hours urged the jury to convict. He was followed by Mr. Nichols, who split his talk into an hour today and an equal interval tomorrow. Martin W. Littleton is to make the closing speech for the defense Wednesday.

month. And Hoquiam has 11,500 persons. Hoquiam's police judge, J. D. Ehrhart, waited patiently, morning after morning in court for something or somebody to turn up. Then he blushing accepted a warrant for his pay up to date and quit with apologies. If anybody happens to get arrested after this, Mayor Ehrhart will appoint a temporary justice to attend to the case and take the pay out of the fine, if there is any in sight. This city is policed by Chief Joseph L. Haven and six assistants. They cover a wide territory that includes several miles of waterfront, half a dozen nautical adjacent logging camps and mills, and a busy business district. The officers keep hustling, but in the expedient of chasing every suspected crook out of town before he has a chance to do anything. Hobbes' law is affright from this place because of the scarcity of labor, that means work or "git."

HOQUIAM NOW MODEL TOWN

and Crime Is Not Known. Jail Grows Rusty and Fills With Cobwebs and Police Judge Regains in Disgrace.

HOQUIAM, Wash., March 15.—(Special.)—With cobwebs growing on the bars of the city jail, rust encrusting the handcuffs that dangle on the walls of the police station, sepulchral echoes resounding in tanks and cells, and the city police judge quitting his job in disgrace because he was assumed to take the money for doing nothing, Hoquiam today stands unique in its class as a crimeless town. There have been only two arrests this month. One was a pilgrim "hop head" who was snoozed on his way. The other was a visiting bootlegger who jumped his bail, returned to two hoboes in town was not officially verified until after their hurried departure, while two or three lions in the city were the victims of a fracas on the street this

WINGS OF THE MORNING

Do not allow the Time to Pass with Nature Unaided

The sculpturing of a statue is a greater thing than the unveiling of it; and so the growth of the unborn infant under its mother's influence is no less important than its entrance into the life that follows.

No woman awaiting the joy of coming motherhood should allow the days to pass without giving nature a helping hand. Mother's Friend is a veritable balm for the nerves, an intensely penetrating application that softens the muscles, relaxes nervous tension of the delicate organism involved in maternity, and prepares the way for an easier, quicker, and practical delivery.

USED BY THREE GENERATIONS As a direct and powerful aid for the relief of the distressing phases in expectancy, and in the alleviation of the hardships that usually come with child-bearing.
