The Oil Method of Tooth Cleansing

The efficiency of CHLOROX as a tooth cleaner is the result of two ingredients and a remarkable process. White Russian Oil and a non-abrasive brushing compound are the two ingredients; the process is one of roller milling in oil so that each atom of polishing agent is thoroughly permeated with oil.

Oil Removes Deposited Impurities

White Russian Oil penetrates tartar formations quickly; softens them; and frees them from the teeth. The action is purely mechanical. There is nothing chemical or medicinal about it. And after the oil has removed all impurities, it puts a glistening polish on clean enamel. Moreover, this wonderful oil massages the gums to healthy hardness over teeth that are absolutely clean. Chlorox polishing or brushing compound is celebrated for its mildness. It does not have to be drastic for it is not supposed to grind impurities from the teeth; it simply carries the oil to the deposits in tooth crevices and removes impurites loosened by this oil. Chlorox is the searching cleanser. It prevents Pyorrhea and other diseases even more dangerous. The same qualities that make Chlorox such an efficient cleanser and polisher of the teeth and such an excellent massage for the gums, prevent Chlorox from hardening in the tube. The oil in Chlorox keeps it fresh to the last bit. Chlorox never wastes. Ask your druggist for the "Milled-in-Oil" tooth cleanser in the blue and white checkered tube. Chlorox Is Sold Everywhere
