WHITHER AWAY ON THE WANDERING ROAD?

Road's end is the hut in the wilderness, where all trails grow faint and cease to run. It lies at the end of a thousand roads, broidered with leaf and turf, and laced with laughing streams.

And that's why it's fun to be motorist-to slip away some morning on a road your car has never taken, in quest of road's end and wayside adventure. And all roads, in their meanderings, are sometime subject to discussion in the columns of the automobile section of The Sunday Oregonian, where Lair H. Gregory bolds forth for

H. Gregory holds forth for nany an interesting paragraph and page. You'll find the road you're looking for, with data invalu-able, somewhere in the Sunday auto department.
