

"FEARFUL" LOSS LAID TO UNPREPAREDNESS

Military Training Urged by Senator Wadsworth.

POLICY IS DEFENDED

To Ask Veterans of World War to Continue to Defend Country Is Declared Unfair.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Unpreparedness on the part of the United States was directly responsible for "fearful extravagance" in lives and money, Senator Wadsworth, republican of New York, said today in opening discussion on the army reorganization bill submitted by the senate military committee.

Senator Wadsworth, defending the committee plan for training boys between 18 and 21 years, declared it was unfair to ask the veterans of the great war to continue to fill the role of the defenders of the country which was rightfully the duty of "their successors in age."

The bill, the New York senator said, sets up a military policy which emphasizes the dependence of the country on the private soldier and gives the private soldier the prior training which experience shows is necessary so that when he goes into battle he may have a decent chance for his life.

Estimates Are Contradicted. Estimates that more than $1,000,000,000 would be required "actually for compulsory training" were contradicted by Senator Wadsworth, who said the ultimate cost would not exceed $554,000,000.

Provisions for a graduated reduction in the size of the permanent standing army from 280,000 enlisted men and 27,000 commissioned officers to 210,000 men and 15,000 officers in five years, he believed, would make the cost for compulsory military training approximately equal to that necessary for the maintenance of the bill which calls for a permanent army of 300,000 enlisted men and 17,000 officers.

The chairman said the reorganization bill proposed by the general staff "violated our democratic institutions," while under the committee's bill it would be possible to have a "democratic and an economic army" as well.

House Passes Another Bill. Another bill providing for the reorganization of the army and the establishment of a national military policy already has been passed by the house which, however, eliminates entirely universal training sections.

The war department reorganization plan was rejected by the committee, Wadsworth said, because "the committee believed it violated our democratic institutions."

"It would have made our citizen soldier subservient to the regulars," he said, "and it would have established a larger regular army and made it dominate completely the entire military establishment. The committee did not believe in that type of army."

PEACE RESOLUTION READY

law agree that there are three ways of terminating war between belligerent states: First, by a treaty of peace; second, by the conquest and subjugation of one of the belligerents by the other; third, by the cessation of hostilities so long continued that it is evident that there is no intention of resuming them."

The report then cites authorities on the subject, including one from Oppenheim, "International Law," another from Phillimore, "International Law, War and Treaties of Peace," and Mr. Seward, secretary of state as quoted in Moore's "International Law Digest."

The armistice was signed November 11, 1918, the report then continues, "and while a treaty of peace between the Imperial German government and the United States was signed at Versailles on June 28, 1919, it has not been ratified by the senate of the United States, but on the contrary, it has been rejected by the president after an adverse vote upon the question of its ratification."

Duty Declared Plain. "The usual and normal method of terminating the war status having thus failed of accomplishment, it becomes the plain duty of congress to declare the admitted fact that the war is ended."

"There has been a complete suspension of hostilities on both sides without any intention of resuming them. Congress is clearly exercising powers which are in its constitutional rights in recognizing and declaring that the condition described by the writers on international law above quoted has now arrived, and that the war is at an end."

"As by the resolution of April 6, 1919, congress has recognized the fact that war had been thrust upon us, so now it becomes the duty of congress to give an opportunity to the fact that the war is ended. Moreover, the general welfare of the United States imperatively demands that all uncertainty on this subject shall be ended, and that the extraordinary war powers of the government shall be rescinded and set aside."

War Laws Still in Force. "The laws conferring extraordinary powers upon the president for the duration of the war are still in full force and effect and constitutional rights are still suspended. Many of these laws are extremely drastic, and could be justified only as war necessities, but since the war has in fact long since ceased, the justification for those laws no longer exists."

"Some of the war laws were to be operative only during the war, some were to continue for a certain period after the war in order to give an opportunity to adjust and wind up business under war powers and not completed when the war ended, others were to continue in effect for a limited period."

"Each of these laws fixes as the date of the termination of the war the date of the president's proclamation announcing the ratification of the treaty of peace. Section 2 of this resolution proposes, in lieu of the date of the proclamation, the date when this resolution becomes effective as the date of termination of the war."

Effect That of Ratification. "The effect of this resolution on all of the war legislation will be precisely the same as if the president had proclaimed the treaty of peace would have had. Laws that were to be in effect for a period of the war would have ceased with the president's proclamation. Under this resolution they will cease with the date of its passage. On the other hand, laws that were to continue in effect for a time after the ratification and proclamation of the treaty of peace will continue in effect for the specified time after the passage of this resolution. The resolution, therefore, has no effect upon existing laws other than the effect that the ratification and proclamation of the treaty would have had."

Section 3 provides for the resumption of reciprocal trade relations between Germany and the United States for a period of 45 days, and further provides that such reciprocal trade relations shall be permanently established when the president has ascertained and announced that Germany has declared a termination of the war, and has made the waivers and renunciations on behalf of itself and its nationals which are specified in said section.

Violations Provided For. "The placing of these conditions on the resumption of trade with Germany is a reasonable exercise of the power vested in congress by the constitution to regulate commerce with foreign nations, in making certain legislation contingent on a fact to be ascertained and announced by the president, this paragraph follows precedents established in previous acts of congress and especially section 2 of the act of October 1, 1918 (the McKinley tariff act), which was sustained by the supreme court in the case of Field vs. Clark, 143 U. S. P. 64."

Section 4 provides a penalty for violation of section 3 whenever the prohibition provided by the section shall be in force. Section 5 maintains the right to which the United States has become entitled under the terms of the armistice by reason of its participation in the war or otherwise, and ratified, confirms and permanent standing army of 280,000 enlisted men and 27,000 commissioned officers and 15,000 officers in five years, he believed, would make the cost for compulsory military training approximately equal to that necessary for the maintenance of the bill which calls for a permanent army of 300,000 enlisted men and 17,000 officers.

SPEEDING OF MONEY IN RANGE UNDESIRABLE

Wood "Barrel" Outcry Held Badly Overdone.

KING EPISODE RECALLED

Borah's Aim in Expenditure Charges Declared Inaccurate. Even Communists Have Money.

BY MARK SULLIVAN. (Copyright by The New Evening Post, Inc.) WASHINGTON, April 5.—Governor Lowden is the first to come forth with an offer to state publicly the contributions and expenditures connected with his campaign for the presidency. It is a strong position to take, and it helps him. He is better able to do so than General Wood. The current gossip around the various national headquarters is that all of Governor Lowden's expenses are coming out of his own pocket. He is a rich man, and his wife is one of the heirs of the Pullman fortunes.

Wood, on the other hand, is necessarily embarrassed, for several reasons. Wood is, like most army officers, a poor man, with nothing but his army salary. He has not had such personal and complete control of the finances of his campaign as Lowden has.

King Episode Recalled. But aside from this reason, Wood has another embarrassment. It is involved in the King episode. All this outcry about Wood's "barrel" is the King episode coming home to roost again.

Up to January 1 Wood's manager was John T. King. The reason King is now out of the Wood campaign is pretty directly connected with the matter of secrecy about contributions and expenditures. While King was manager he collected money from various persons, some of them friends of his, some of them friends of General Wood. These contributions he expended in such a manner as to tell him effective. He never told General Wood either where the money came from or what it was for. When he was pressed to tell he would not do so. King is a politician of the old school and proud of it. His way of making a present is through confidential personal understandings with other leaders. According to his code, he considered it a disgrace to tell contributors and with politicians, are sacred things. Moreover, his view was that, presidents are better off if they don't know too much about such matters.

Then in December, when William C. Procter became attached to the Wood management, he went at Mr. King quite directly, insisting upon a statement of where the money came from and what had been done with it. King took the ground that he was bound not to make such a statement. And in the present situation, he is being asked to separate from the Wood campaign. To put the issue which has been raised in close and plain detail to any one. And so the relation ceased.

Effectually all the charges made by Senator Borah and others have been concerned with the money that King collected and spent. Within this field nobody except King himself knows anything definite. Wood doesn't know. Procter doesn't know. They both defend their position in close and plain detail to any one. And so the relation ceased.

Purely on a basis of the casual information that appears in the various newspapers, and on the basis of inference from such sources, it might be said that Wood has soap money and chewing gum money; Lowden has oil money; Johnson has sewing machine money; Hoover has grain money and mining money.

Even Communists Have Money. It is entirely futile to talk as if an expenditure of money are wrong. You cannot be a candidate for president without spending a good deal of money. Every political party, every faction and every group has money to have money. Everybody has money. You can't make a campaign without money. It is not possible to give various campaigns used to have money—lots of it. I know, for I held a campaign for a year or two.
