

TWO SUSPECTS HELD FOR SCOTT MURDER

Pair Taken in Lodging House by Police.

PISTOL MAY BE CLEW

Thomas Young, ex-Convict, and George Brown Admit Being in Seattle at Time.

Two suspects whom police detectives and Seattle officials believe have been implicated in the murder of Robert C. Scott, ex-Portland detective, at Seattle early Sunday morning were arrested in Portland last night and are being held incommunicado at the city jail.

The two men are Thomas Young, aged 23, an ex-convict from San Quentin prison, California, and George Brown, aged 28, believed to be a recent yegg. They were arrested at the Berkeley rooming house, Third and Taylor streets.

Upon information received by him at Seattle, Sheriff Stringer of Seattle, accompanied by Deputies Hughes, Heebe and Vaughn, arrived in Portland early yesterday and enlisted the aid of the Portland police detectives in a close search of all rooming houses and haunts of drug addicts.

The two men under arrest were located at the Berkeley rooming house and the man Brown answers in most particulars the description of the bandit who murdered Deputy Sheriff Scott during the early hours of last Sunday morning.

Search Reveals Evidence. A Seattle deputy first made a search of the room occupied by Young and Brown during their absence and uncovered sufficient evidence to justify the police in making an immediate arrest.

Police Inspectors La Salle, Swenne, McCulloch and Schulpius took up the search at this point and waited in the room for the men.

When Brown and Young returned to their room they were met with the command, "Hands up" from the four detectives, who had the pistol covered with guns as soon as they entered the door. Brown reached for his own gun, but when Schulpius threatened to shoot if he made another move, he put his hands aloft and submitted to arrest.

Sheriff Stringer and his three deputies went at once to police headquarters to examine the two suspects. The three deputies, including Scott when he was murdered. The deputies said that Brown answers in a general way the description of the bandit whom they surprised in the series of automobile holdups near Seattle the night Scott was murdered, but they did not get an opportunity to have a good look at the bandit at the time of the murder.

Two Witnesses Summoned. In order to make the identification certain one way or another, Sheriff Stringer last night telegraphed to Seattle for two witnesses to come to Portland and be present to examine the two men under arrest.

Scott was murdered with a .41-caliber revolver of a type and style which went out of fashion several years ago. The older man, Young, was carrying a revolver of this exact type when he was arrested here last night. Bullets of the same manufacture and character which were used in killing Scott were found on the men arrested in Portland.

Sheriff Stringer likewise telegraphed to Seattle last night for photographs of the shells and bullets used by the bandit who murdered Scott. Tests were made with the gun taken from Clark last night and photographs will be made tomorrow of the bullets after being fired, and of the shells used in the firing tests.

Shells May Be Clew. Sheriff Stringer explained that most guns, and especially old weapons, have some characteristic marks which are generally observed on the shells which have been fired. If the empty shells from the gun used in murdering Scott show the same characteristics of the shells taken from the suspects taken into custody last night, the two men will be returned to Seattle, he said.

As they entered the room, Brown was carrying a new burglar's "jimmy," which they evidently had taken down town to have sharpened. The "jimmy" was wrapped up in paper as though it had just come from some store. A complete outfit of burglar's tools also was cached in the room.

Two new witnesses and numerous articles which the police believe may be loot from other burglaries were among the effects of the two suspects. They had only $50 or $60 between them when arrested.

While being questioned at police headquarters, Young told the detectives that had he been given a moment's warning he would have shot the first man he saw entering the room.

"If you hadn't got the drop on me you would never have taken me alive," he is said to have boasted to La Salle.

Young and Brown both admitted they were in Seattle Saturday night, but refused to talk further concerning their past conduct. Young admitted he is out on parole from the California prison, where he was serving a life term for the murder of a San Francisco policeman.

According to his own statements to the detectives, Young and his twin brother murdered a policeman in San Francisco in 1908. Young was sentenced to life imprisonment, but was paroled last year after serving 11 years. His brother was sentenced to from ten years to life and was released in 1918. He said his twin brother is now in Seattle. Young is nearly six feet tall and does not answer for description of the bandit who murdered Scott.

California Prison Notified. Police detectives said last night that California prison officials will be advised at once of Young's arrest in Portland, and if he is not returned to Seattle in connection with the present case, he will be returned to San Quentin as a parole violator. Knowledge that his freedom would be taken from him led Young to boast after his capture that he would have engaged the detectives in a gun fight to death had he been given an opportunity to use his gun.

Young also said that Brown is wanted for some serious offense, but refused to reveal anything further concerning his partner's past record. Brown assumed a sullen and defiant attitude and refused to answer questions put to him by his captors.

Murdered Deputy Buried. The murdered deputy, Robert Scott, was buried yesterday in Multnomah cemetery following funeral services at Holman's chapel. Hundreds of friends of the murdered detective attended the services and a massive floral wreath was sent here by his fellow deputies in Sheriff Stringer's office at Seattle.

Sheriff Stringer spoke in glowing tribute of the work performed by Scott, who had been employed by him since early last fall in running down jewelry robbers in the sound city. Prior to his going to Seattle, Scott had been a special agent for District Attorney Evans and the late Governor Withycombe in the ferreting out of bootleggers throughout the state.

He leaves a widow and two small children, besides a father and brother, all residents of Portland.
