

JUNGE IS INDICTED ON LARCENY CHARGE

Trial on Four Counts Faced by Truck Dealer.

NEW BAIL CUT DENIED

Judge McCourt Refuses to Reduce Amount to $3000—Bond First
Fixed at $15,000.

Indictments on four counts, one of obtaining money by false pretenses and three charging larceny by bailee, were returned against August Junge, local manager of the Diamond-T Truck Agency, by the Multnomah county grand jury yesterday afternoon. Junge was brought back to Portland Monday by Deputy Sheriff Schirmer from Scotland, E. D., where he had been traced by Sheriff Hurlbert after a precipitate flight from this city.

Though Attorney E. V. Littlefield pleaded to have Junge's bail reduced to $3000, Presiding Judge McCourt refused to lower it further, having already consented to cutting the amount from $15,000 to $5000.

"If, as you say, Junge will be able to save approximately $100,000 for his creditors from the wreck of his company, it seems to me some of them would be willing to put up bond for $5000," commented Judge McCourt. "He ran away once, and a stiff bond is necessary to see that he does not do so again."

When Junge first took up his quarters in the county jail he boasted that there were six men in Portland who would be glad to go his $15,000 bond, and that, if necessary, his wife's relatives would cheerfully dig up $150,000 to keep him from being confined. His attorney yesterday declared that he was doubtful if he could raise even $2000, if the bail was reduced as requested.

At his own request, Junge went before the grand jury Thursday afternoon to explain the circumstances of his tangled finances. Immediately after he concluded the grand jury announced that it was ready to grant him his case. The report was accepted yesterday and consisted of the four true bills.

The first of the indictments involves the sale of a contract for a truck Junge is said not to have owned. The truck was sold by Junge in July, 1919, to H. T. Donivan of Portland.

The conditional sale contract was assigned to D. G. Lebb, a broker. In January, 1920, Donivan discovered that he was unable to continue the payments. Junge was said to have offered to buy back the assignment to Stephenson and make out a new contract for Donivan at longer, easier terms.

This new contract was made out for $3448 and assigned to the Broadway bank. The original indictment is based on the alleged fact that the original contract was never canceled, so that there were two contracts outstanding on the same truck, though it is asserted that about $1500 of the second sale price was paid to Stephenson by Junge on the same truck.

The three other indictments, charging larceny by bailee, all are based on trucks "kidnaped" and taken to Vancouver, Wash., by brokers who thought they had title to them.

There were 13 of these trucks, which disappeared at 1 o'clock one Sunday morning from the Diamond-T garage. The indictments involve six of them.

All of these trucks were the property of the Western Bond & Mortgage company and were only loaned to Junge for him to sell according to Thomas Maguire, deputy district attorney in charge of the investigation before the grand jury. They were turned over to D. G. Lebb and Ben F. Walling as collateral for debts owed by Junge. It is maintained in bringing the indictment, the transfer to these brokers being in effect a bill of sale of trucks to which Junge had no title. The automobiles were all recovered in replevin actions brought by the Western Bond & Mortgage company.
